Snow and Sunshine.
Surprising Mr. Sandino.
Fat Body—Tired Heart.
Forty the Best Age.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

HODGE, Cal., Jan. 7.

EASTERN visitors wonder at little striped awnings seen at the driver's window on California automobiles. Driving about Southern California, they soon understand. Without such awnings, sunshine makes the driving wheel too hot, for pleasant driving.

ON THIS Mojave table land, 2,000 feet above the Pacific, the sun is less hot, snakes and lizards hibernate, but onions and other crops grow through the winter. And nothing grows unless you plant and irrigate it, therefore there are no weeds. Onion growers will know what that means.

IN NEARBY mountains, 4,000 feet higher than this desert, the snow lies very deep. Los Angeles people motor up to Big Bear, for skiing and tobogganing, and return with snow piled high on running boards and mud guards to let neighbors see what it looks like. You find variety here.

MR. SANDINO, Nicaragaun rebel who shot our marines—getting his money, ammuntion and khaki uniforms from "some othei country," according to Colonel Gulick, is said to be fleeing to the mountain forests with his men. It took Uncle Sam a long time to persuade Sandino that killing our men is dangerous pastime. Many Mexicans, to this day, believe that they could beat the United States easily enough, if it were not for Texas, which won't let them. They have fought Texans, and know what that means.

THE Navy plans to send a flock of airplanes carrying re-enforcements of marines to Nicaragua, on a non-stop flight. That excellent idea should have a wholesome effect. Instead of sending a few planes, we should be able to send a swarm of a thousand, and on the trip let gentlemen that send ammunition to Sandino know what sort of trouble they are inviting.

EVEN a few planes, from our pathetic little collection, will have some effect. Gringos, writing letters in Washington, then swiftly backing down when anything happens, are not convincing to Mexicans.

But Gringos dropping solid, explosive messages from the air would be most convincing.

IN ONE way or another this country should uphold its treaty rights for a Nicaragua canal and prove that it takes seriously President Coolidge's warnings and accusations of last January and last April, concerning Mexico's conspiracy, and secret warfare against the United States.

IF YOU are too fat, you treat your heart unjustly. So says Dr. James McLester. The heart works harder to carry extra weight, but that is only part of it. Fifty to 100 useless pounds of weight represent endless billions of living cells that demands nourishment, heat, water, and their added share of the energy that causes metabolism or change of tissue.

EXTRA weight tires the body, brain and heart, constituting a "loafer class," or idle rich class in the system that shortens life, diminishes comfort and usefulness. In that a human body is like a government. Idle rich that consume and contribute nothing, except silly opinions, are harmful to the entire body politic and a way should be found to make them work.

AN INSANE person is not allowed to control his property: Is there any good reason why an idle, non-productive drone

COLLAPSES GOING TO CHAIR

Three severe hemorrhages suffered last night nearly stopped the death march of Raymond Winter this morning to Rockview Penitentiary, where he will be shocked to death Monday morning for the murder of two children, Alexander and Helen Sabo, of Mollenauer.

On the steps of the county jail, Winter paused a brief moment to say goodbye for the last time to his parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Winter of Brentwood, and to a younger brother, Clarence.

Weak from the loss of blood, Winter was supported by two deputy sheriffs. He was smiling.

For an instant he seemed not to notice his father, and gave his attention to the early morning crowd that surrounded the jail entrance.

"Just a moment, son."

"Oh, goodbye, dad," Winter replied.

"And you, mother."

Mrs. Winter came forward dazed, and with her eyes filled with tears, kissed her son for the last time, then collapsed in a heap on the steps of the jail.

As Winter was being whisked into a waiting automobile, his father stooped to lift his wife, and as he did so he screamed to Sheriff Robert Braun: "This is a murder, and you're one of the murderers!"

BROTHER HALTED

Winter's brother dived down the steps toward his doomed kin and raised a hand with an oath to the deputy who barred his way.

En route to the station Winter again collapsed.

Preparations are being made by members of the Eightieth Division, with whom Winter served in France, for a military funeral.

Attorney Charles B. Pritchard, who defended Winter, said yesterday that all hope for a further stay was lost when no word was received from Gov. Fisher.

Winter, who received the news of his doom yesterday, declared that he would "die like a soldier."

Winter, a street car conductor, was convicted by the testimony of persons who told of his pervert tendencies with children. He was arrested a few days after the Sabo children were found in a thicket clubbed to death.

During his 45-week confinement in the county jail Winter insisted he was innocent of the crime.

U. S. ATTORNEY MEYER ASSISTS TRAIN VICTIM

Help rendered by United States District Attorney John D. Meyer failed to save the life of Mike Martino, 40, trackwalker, of 14½ Stoebner way, run over by a city-bound Derry passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad near Edgewood Station this morning.

The federal prosecutor, who resides in Edgewood, hurried to the scene and assisted in carrying the injured man to his car, then drove him to Columbia Hospital. Martino suffered loss of both legs below the knee and died a short time later from loss of blood.

THE WEATHER

Cloudy. Possibly light rain tonight or Sunday. Slightly warmer tonight; lowest temperature tonight 40 to 45 degrees. Somewhat colder Sunday.

DR. AND MRS. W. J. WINTER

Trembling in agony of spirit as his son, Raymond Winter, left the Allegheny county jail for death cell in Rockview penitentiary today, Dr. W. J. Winter said to Sheriff Robert H. Braun: "This is murder, and you're one of the murderers." Winter and his mother both collapsed as deputy sheriffs ended their farewell in the jail office to take the condemned man away.

TIDAL WAVE FOLLOWS IN WAKE

LONDON, Jan. 7. — As more complete checks were made today, it was feared that 20 persons were drowned when the Thames burst its banks in the heart of London and flooded the adjacent sections.

Reports coming in during the late morning showed the flood waters extended from Hammerstein to Southend, at the mouth of the river.

A tidal wave flooded the fishing village of Heybridge, Essex. The village is under six feet of water and 300-houses are flooded. Inhabitants have been driven to the upper floors of their homes and are obtaining provisions by means of boats.

Fearful that the high tide at 2 p. m. would wreak further damage, police warned all occupants of houses in the low lying streets of London to be prepared to evacuate immediately.

Temporary barricades were being erected at the broken embankments in an attempt to stem further encroachments by the waters.

Many members of Parliament, living adjacent to Westminster, turned out, and aided the police in their work of rescue.

Among the famous landmarks inundated were the Woolwich Arsenal, Tate Galleries, the ancient Tower of London and the Waterloo and St. Thomas hospitals.

The Lots Road power station, supplying all the London subway services, was also flooded.

As the flood waters reached the Dartford districts, lower down the river, indescribable scenes of confusion occurred when the main

Strip Gangs War, 2 Shot

As a result of last night's flare-up between gangsters in the Strip, two men are in the West Penn Hospital and two others, said to be responsible for a shooting fray in a confectionery store at 2801 Penn avenue, were held over at a hearing this morning before Magistrate John Orie at the Penn Avenue Police Station.

Edward J. Konkel, 22, of 220 Thirty-eighth street, and Caesar Czachrowski, 17, of 2821 Penn avenue, are the latest victims in the Strip's gang war. They fell before a rain of bullets said to have come from the gun of Eddie Stefanowicz, 23, of Penn avenue. Stefanowicz's companion, according to testimony, was Brownie Sharp, 23, of Banner way.

Stefanowicz told Magistrate Orie that he and Sharp had been threatened by Konkel and Czachrowski and when they entered the store last night, Konkel and Czachrowski started a fight. When one of them reached for his hip pocket, Stefanowicz said, he pulled his gun and fired.

Konkel received wounds in his neck and cheek and Czachrowski was shot in the arm. Both are said to be in fair condition at the hospital.

Orlando Sodini, 22, of Jasper way, a clerk in the store, who was arrested with Stefanowicz and Sharp, was discharged at the hearing.

Remove 4 More S-4 Bodies

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Four more bodies of S-4 victims had been recovered today, making seven in all that have been reclaimed from the wreck off Provincetown.

The last four bodies found were on the floor between the motors in positions which seemed to indicate that they had been huddled together under a tarpaulin which enshrouded two of them and which divers said probably had covered the other pair.

Their discovery in that position caused divers to believe that the

Blackmail Defied by Saunders

By Universal Service.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 7.—His family and himself threatened with "the most brutal crime ever committed," Clarence Saunders, millionaire chain grocer, defied three blackmailers who had written him demanding $5,500.

Saunders posted a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the three men, who had signed themselves as "Ghost Men" to the letter of extortion, after notifying the authorities and turning the letter for publication over to the newspapers.

IT'S GREENSBURG AGAIN

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—A court decree has finally established the correct form of spelling the name of this new third class city. It is Greensburg and not Greenesburg. Originally named for Gen. Nathanael Greene, the town was incorporated with the final "e," but it was dropped in everyday use. Recently agitation sought to restore the "e".

Newly-elected aldermen who took office last Monday had refused to lift their commissions from Harrisburg, due to the spelling. New commissions to conform to the new spelling will be asked. A copy of the court order was sent to Harrisburg.

SET DEATH STAGE FOR RUTH

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Sing Sing Prison authorities today began final preparations for the double execution of Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray.

Twenty-four witnesses have been selected for the execution. Twenty of them will be newspapermen, four physicians. All will sign the register as witnesses. Formal invitations will be sent them within the next few days by Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

The execution will take place a few minutes before midnight next Thursday.

No telephone nor telegraph wires will be allowed in the prison, for the warden wants as little sensationalism as possible. Wires will be installed in the Ossining railroad station, half a mile away.

A woman, perhaps two women, will accompany Mrs. Snyder to the execution chamber. Several matrons were present at the execution of Mrs. Martha Place years ago.

Mrs. Snyder and Gray have both given up hope that their attorneys will be able to save them from the electric chair. Mrs. Snyder was in a high nervous state this morning. Gray was resigned to his fate and quite calm.

Three alienists of the state lunacy commission will examine the couple, who were convicted of the sashweight murder of Albert Snyder, art editor. This examination will take place next Wednesday to ascertain whether the mental strain of the last few days has brought out any indications of insanity. The alienists will report to Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Mrs. Snyder's behavior when she goes to the chair has become the subject of conjecture. Prison guards generally believe she will walk quietly down the long corridor of the death house, meeting her end calmly. On the other hand, Alfred Conyes, 30 years a guard at the prison, who helped lead Mrs. Place to her doom, declared:

"You never can tell how a woman will act in such a terrible

MARINES' CHIEF TO RUSH TO NICARAGUA FIGHTING FRONT

LEJEUNE GOING TO FRONT

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, will sail for Nicaragua on Monday. He will be accompanied by Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, who is to assume active command of the marine forces chasing Gen. Sandino and of 1,000 troops being sent to Nicaragua to reinforce those on the front.

Lejeune will make a personal inspection tour of all the marine encampments in Nicaragua and then return to the United States by way of San Diego. It is understood he was actuated in going to the scene of operations by the reverses the marines have suffered in their efforts to wipe out Sandino's rebels.

Marine Corps officials, including the commandant, laughed today over reports that Sandino's rebels were being trained by marine deserters. The only basis for the story, Lejeune said, was the fact that two marines were dropped from the rolls last September for desertion.

"Imagination has supplied the rest," he said. "To have joined Sandino the two men would have had to travel 125 miles inland on foot, and that doesn't appear reasonable. As a matter of fact, we have reason to believe the two deserters smuggled themselves aboard a ship bound for the United States and are now in this country."

Marine intelligence officers believe that the rebel chief, however, has been aided by a German soldier of fortune named Mueller. This German is said to have been a non-commissioned officer in the German army during the war and emigrated to Latin America several years ago. They credit him with giving Sandino's rebels the military training evidenced in recent skirmishes.

GUARD RAILROAD

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 7—(AP.)—There was another situation today for the marines to take in hand. Depredations and disorder near the port of Corinto raised the fear that railway communication between the capital and the sea might be cut.

A force of 150 United States marines was available for duty in the region and it was considered likely that they would be posted at strategic points along the railway. This railway, the only one in Nicaragua, connects Managua and other points of the interior with the sea.

Sixty men, well armed and well mounted, attacked the laborers on a plantation at La Cabrera de Ameya, advices from the district of Chinandega stated. The bandits plundered the district and committed various depredations.

Since Ameya is directly across the Bay of Estero from Corinto, it was feared that an attempt might be made to blow up the bridge connecting Corinto to the mainland, thus cutting off the seaport of Parril.

MORE BARS STRENGTHEN COUNTY JAIL

The "Bridge of Sighs," over which prisoners are taken from the court rooms in the Allegheny County courthouse to the jail, is being made escape proof. men had been trying to keep warm when death overtook them, and it opened up a wide field for speculation over the possibility that the engine room victims might have lived for some time after the crash.

The only sounds ever to come from the shattered hulk were from the torpedo room, where six men long survived the horror of their entombment.

The bodies were brought to the Chelsea Naval Hospital to await identificaion before burial at Washington.

The naval court of inquiry into the disaster, which has been sitting at the Charlestown Navy Yard, called upon Lieut. Com. John S. Bayliss, commander of the coast guard destroyer Paulding, which sank the S-4, to testify today.

streets were inundated. Hundreds of barrels of merchandise floated about the streets while their owners and thousands of other persons took refuge in the upper floors of their homes.

The densely populated districts of Lambeth and Westminster were the worst sufferers. The water came over the terraces of the houses of parliament and flooded the quadrangles and all nearby basements.

Street cars running along the Victoria bank were compelled to suspend service for several hours and the tube service was disrupted as the waters poured into the subway entrances.

About the houses along Grosvenor road the water was four feet deep. White-faced, terror-stricken women watched from upper floors while police and firemen searched the basements for victims.

In this section five adults and four children were drowned. They were all trapped in their beds when the water rushed into their rooms.

Five more victims were believed to be lying under water along Grosvenor road.

The port of London authority this afternoon issued a warning that a repetition of the flood is possible during the next few days.

The tides will be of increasing height until Tuesday and, as storms are forecast and flood conditions from Christmas snows prevail in the Thames Valley, the danger to London continues.

The danger was past for today when the ebb tide began at 1:35 p. m. The river was a foot above normal. The next high tide is at 2:18 o'clock tomorrow morning.

situation."

Several guards were of the opinion that she would be carried, screaming, to the chair.

Warden Lawes, however, said both Mrs. Snyder and Gray were physically and mentally strong and he did not expect her emotions to be greater than those of any other condemned person.

"She will die bravely—she has been a brave girl," said her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, has told her all hope of clemency is gone.

Mrs. Snyder wept quietly when her mother brought this ominous information.

Gray has been resigned for days. He is deadly calm—fatalistic in his attitude.

"If I must die in atonement for my crime," he said today, "I will die willingly. I am prepared to meet my God.

He spends nearly all his time reading the Bible. Now and then he paces the floor of his cell, praying half aloud.

Mrs. Snyder is expected to be greatly influenced during her last hours by the ministrations of Father John McCaffrey, Catholic chaplain, who has done much to console her. She was a Lutheran, but has shown distinct leaning toward Catholicism.

should be allowed to control his? That may sound like the dreaded "Bolshevism" now. But some day, it will become necessary to recall earnestly Prudhomme's warning "monarchies are destroyed by poverty, republics are destroyed by wealth."

B. C. FORBES says that great banking houses, notably Morgan & Co., biggest of the aggressively enterprising firms, admit to partnership men about 40 years old. Davison, Lamont, Morrow and other important Morgan partners were taken in at about 40, the age supposed to combine sound judgment with power to carry a heavy load.

IN OTHER days, forty began the "graybeard" age. Great careers, Alexander and Napoleon, the two most spectacular, were over at that age. Age is pushed farther and farther back, and the J. P. Morgan of 200 years hence may be selecting 75-year-old partners for their "combination of mental and physical strength."

SENATOR CAPPER of Kansas seeks reduction in railroad freights on grain. Not all farmers realize that Uncle Sam's money has been spent to make it impossible for farmers in some parts of the United States to compete with Canadian farmers. Northwest Canadian wheat reaches our East coast and Europe, through the Panama canal, at low freight rates. This country built the canal at the same rate as Americans pay.

FARMERS in this country, away from the seaboard, pay very high railroad freights to either coast, and cannot compete with more fortunately placed Canadians. That applies to products other than grain.

RAILROADS must live and grow, of course. But if the government cannot or should not reduce freights on grain, why not give a bounty or subsidy to farmers unfortunately situated. Better still, why not build canals, as Europe does, and give farmers water transportation to the Atlantic and the Gulf?

Illegally Tag Cars PARKED NEAR PAY STATIONS On Unmarked Streets

CHATHAM STREET

WEBSTER AVENUE

SEVENTH AVENUE

NO "NO PARKING" SIGN HERE

One place where parking motorists get tagged is in Chatham street between Webster avenue and Bigelow boulevard. There is no sign of any kind here to warn the autoist against leaving his machine and for many months automobiles were not molested. Within the past six or seven weeks, however, taggers have been working this street and five minutes more than an hour is sure to bring a green invitation to traffic court.

SIGNS HERE UNNOTICEABLE

Automobiles parked in Webster avenue between Tunnel and Chatham streets are almost sure to get a tag from the alert police tagger on the beat despite the fact the sign explaining that one-hour parking is the rule is barely visible. There is only one sign at the corner of Tunnel street and it is so old and dirty that a motorist is unable to read it 10 feet away.

NO SIGNS—BUT PLENTY OF TAGS

A similar situation exists in Seventh avenue, between Bigelow boulevard and Webster avenue. Hardly a day passes that a dozen or more motorists get tags, although there is no sign to show that the police rule is one-hour parking. Six pay parking stations are within a three-block radius of these unjust and illegal tagging operations and many motorists, having business in the downtown districts immediately adjacent, are forced to park even though their business may call for but a short stay.

AGENTS BY SCORE FLUNK DRY TEST

'BEST MEN' FAIL ON EXAMS

By M. L. RAMSAY,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Examinations given by the Civil Service Commission have worked havoc in the ranks of prohibition agents, who "flunked out" by the scores, it is announced.

So large a proportion of the present agents failed to qualify, Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran said, that he has asked the commission to give the examinations over again, making them simpler.

"I think the tests were too difficult for the work," Doran said. "If the results were accepted we would lose many of our best men. We don't hire a questionnaire; we hire a man."

Eighty-five per cent of the dry agents in the Virginia-North Carolina-South Carolina district were rejected by the commission, Administrator R. Q. Merrick, at Richmond, reported to Doran. About the same proportion fell down in West Virginia.

Heavy casualties also were reported in the Maryland-District of Columbia district, to the chagrin of Administrator John F. J. Herbert.

"What I want is men who can raid a bar-room in Baltimore or 'knock off' a still in Southern Maryland," Herbert lamented to Doran. "I'm not greatly concerned whether they can spell 'idiosyncrasy.'"

Although detailed reports from other districts are lacking, many agents everywhere failed to pass, according to Doran.

What tripped up the agents was the written examination. The examination was declared at the Commission's offices to have consisted of questions on enforcement problems and the like, rather than scholastic attainments.

A mark of 60 was required to pass. The agents have still to run the gauntlet of oral tests, which have been delayed by lack of funds.

There are about 2,200 jobs to be filled in the agent, inspector and investigator classes.

BABCOCK STILL WANTS INDIANS

The ambition of County Commissioner E. V. Babcock to secure "real" Indians for the two county parks is still as strong as ever, although during the last week or two he has met several setbacks in the refusal of Western redskins to come here and live in comfortable houses at the expense of the county. The commissioner believes other Indians in the country might agree to the proposition.

In his quest of redskins Commissioner Babcock communicated with the superintendent of the Cheyenne reservation in South Dakota, who in turn asked the Indians on the reservation if they cared to come here and live among the buffalos in the parks. They intimated that they were not interested. Next a prominent rancher was asked to help, and he searched among his Indian friends, but met with little success. He said only one old chief had seemed interested, but only until the chief's wife decided she liked the West best.

JUDD TRIED TO KILL HUSBAND TWICE—RUTH

Ruth Snyder has written her own story of her love for Judd Gray and the brutal murder of her husband, Albert Snyder. The story was written in her death cell in Sing Sing prison under the sinister shadow of the electric chair in which she is condemned to die Thursday night, January 12.

These startling revelations are contained in what is probably Ruth Snyder's last bit of writing:

(Copyright, 1928, by New York Daily Mirror.)

That Judd Gray twice before the fatal sashweight night attempted to kill Albert Snyder and that she prevented him from carrying out his plans both times.

That several times as her illicit love with the corset salesman-Lothario neared its murderous climax, she seriously contemplated suicide as the only way of extricating herself from her difficulties.

That a mysterous woman friend "turned" on her and blackmailed her on the threat of revealing the secret romance to Snyder.

Thursday the woman pleaded guilty to six charges of passing bad checks, but denied that she had a record as the Bertillon operators charged. A postponement of 10 days was arranged, but yesterday the operators produced the evidence to show that the woman had several aliases, had been arrested in several Ohio cities and also was wanted in Detroit. The photographs came by air mail.

YOUTH, 17, DIES IN CHAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A 17-year-old boy, the youngest slayer ever electrocuted by Ohio, paid with his life in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary last night for killing a mother and her 5-year-old son.

The youth was Floyd Hewitt, who slew Mrs. Fred Brown and her son Fred, Jr., at their Conneaut (O.) home last February.

Hewitt seemed dazed and puzzled in the death chamber, but apparently was unmoved.

Entering the chamber his eyes swept the group of witnesses, but he did not speak. His last words, spoken before entering the death chamber, maintained innocence of the crime of which he had previously confessed.

In his confession Hewitt said he beat Mrs. Brown to death when she repulsed his advances and killed the child to silence him.

GETS 3 YEARS IN HOLDUP

George Lipps, chauffeur, of 187 Noble avenue, Crafton, who with Steve Kisser and Charles Slack, of Carnegie, was accused of holding up J. W. E. Culbertson, of Carnegie, an usher at the Pennsylvania Station, pleaded guilty to robbery in Criminal Court and was sentenced by Judge James R. Macfarlane to the penitentiary for one and one-half to three years. Culbertson was held up after midnight November 12 in the Campbells Run road and his pockets rifled. Lipps said a broken gun was used. Lipps also admitted the larceny of tires from the car of W. H. 1928 Jury Prospects Chosen

32,000 NAMES CHOSEN FROM AMONG 750,000 TAXABLE RESIDENTS OF COUNTY

Drawing of 32,000 names of taxable residents of Allegheny county for jury selection in the various county courts during 1929 is a complicated task just completed by the staff of the jury commission. Each fiftieth name is drawn from drawers containing the 750,000 taxables of the county. About one-half of the names drawn are found eligible for jury service after the investigators of the commission have finished their inquiries.

Sally Saucy -:- This Lighter Works -:- Contest Winner

Molly O'Day finds her sister, Sally O'Neil, a little pert in this scene from "The Lovelorn," film version of the Beatrice Fairfax novel.

Barbara de Bazoky, in "Drums of Love," scorns both the cigaret and the patent torch and gets down to fundamentals and a big cigar as a woman who smokes.

Marie Casajuana, who plays with Victor McLaglen in "A Girl in Every Port," is the winner of a motion picture contest held in Spain.

Leatrice Joy May Join Fox Company After Expiration Of Contract With De Mille

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.

IN THREE months Leatrice Joy's contract expires with Cecil De Mille. The reports are that she will celebrate the culmination of this agreement by moving to the Fox lot. 'Tis whispered that Leatrice will take the place left vacant when Olive Borden packed up her makeup box and traveled forth into the cold world.

I cannot see that Miss Joy can do anything else but go with another company. De Mille has had good pictures, but few of the good ones have starred Miss Joy. Incidentally, the two have not seemed a very harmonious combination. When Miss Joy went with the De Mille company she was at the heighth of her popularity and was one of the best known stars on the screen. That she still has her following, speaks exceedingly well for her.

Irving Thalberg is not only a good husband, but he is a good manager as well. The other day, in a purchasing mood, he bought the screen rights to "Ballyhoo," Beth Brown's popular novel. Of course, I may be all wrong on my assumption that Irving had Miss Shearer in mind when he made the deal, but it just seems made for her, some way. The story deals with a girl in a small Virginia town who has a fight with her fiance; meets a man playing an accordion in a carnival; she joins the carnival and from then on comes the action, as they say in the subtitles.

This is a busy season for the youngsters. Dorothy Revier, the little brunette who played opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Drop Kick," is going a-visiting. Papa Harry Cohn has given Dorothy permission to play over in the Fox yard for a little while—long enough, that is, to do one of the principal parts in "The Red Dancer of Moscow." Dorothy, of course, is under contract to Columbia and has been a featured player for the past year. She is a cute little trick and I don't blame Fox for wanting to borrow her.

Who'll be the next? I mean what company will be next to announce to the palpitating public that they have discovered another comedy team? Paramount has the Beery-Hatton and Conklin-Fields teams; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have Carl Dane and George K. Arthur, and now comes Universal, the latest to herald the forming of a new team of this sort. They feel they have the perfect combination in George Sidney and Albert Gran, the taxicab driver of "Seventh Heaven." Mr. Gran and Mr. Sidney did so well in "We Americans" for Universal that Carl Laemmle lost no time in preparing to co-feature the two comedians in "Give and Take," which William Baudine will direct.

At last, at last, at last. We can now go on with our daily tasks and cease fretting. Paramount has decided what to do with "The Wedding March." It will make its bow in New York early in February at a legitimate theater. The length up to now is 12 reels. That means two shows a day but only one picture. I imagine the decision to keep it in one day's performance was reached after a reckoning with Wall street in dollars and cents. You can't see Wall street growing very enthusiastic over a movie that occupies two days. "Parsifal" is the only all-day performance that's a paying proposition—and you'd hardly compare Eric Von Stroheim's handiwork with an opera of the standing of "Parsifal."

Eddie Sutherland will direct "Quick Lunch," the next W. C. Fields-Chester Conklin comedy. Eddie is a past-master at the fine art of side-splitting. He wielded the megaphone for the Beery-Hatton team with such hilarious results as "We're In the Navy Now," "Behind the Front," "Now We're In the Air" and others. Hence, credit for the direction of the year's best comedies goes to Eddie Sutherland.

The mystery is solved. We can all go about our business with a light heart. Adolphe Menjou's next picture will be called "Captain Farreel." Buster Collier will play one of the important roles, and Evelyn Brent will play the leading lady. This is the Lothar Mendez picture which has been under discussion for so many months.

Contest Beauties in Fashion Revue

Ron B. Woodyard's "Varieties and Fashions of 1928" will open Monday in the Harris. In the cast will be several of the contestants in the most recent Atlantic City beauty pageant. One of them is "Miss Washington, D. C." who will appear in several leading roles in the production. Another is "Miss Ohio," who was selected at the Ohio beauty pageant last year and then was barred, when it was learned that she was a "professional beauty." "Varieties and Fashions of 1928" is a miniature musical revue, revealing the styles of yesterday, today and tomorrow, with songs and dances and comedy.

CHICAGO GIRL WINS TYPING CONTEST

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Cecelia Burnleister, of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R., writing checks at the rate of 204 an hour won the national speed check-writing contest. Christine Howarth from the New York City offices of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was second.

"New Buildings Out of Old Materials," will be the subject of the Rev. B. M. Paul's sermon Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Lawrenceville Presbyterian Church. Union services will be held in the Forty-third Street Presbyterian Church in the evening at 8 o'clock.

The Emmanuel Baptist Church Bible Class has begun its activities under the leadership of A. V. Rosell of South America. Classes are held every Sunday at 9:45 a. m., immediately after the Church School service. Communion services will be observed in the church at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. At the evening service a lecture of the church history with stereopticon views will be given.

During the Forty Hours, the occasion will be solemnly celebrated at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the Epiphany Roman Catholic Church, with a solemn high mass and the combined junior and senior choirs singing in four voices C. A. Bossi's celebrated "Missa Eucharistica," rendered under the personal direction of Prof. John Sedlacek.

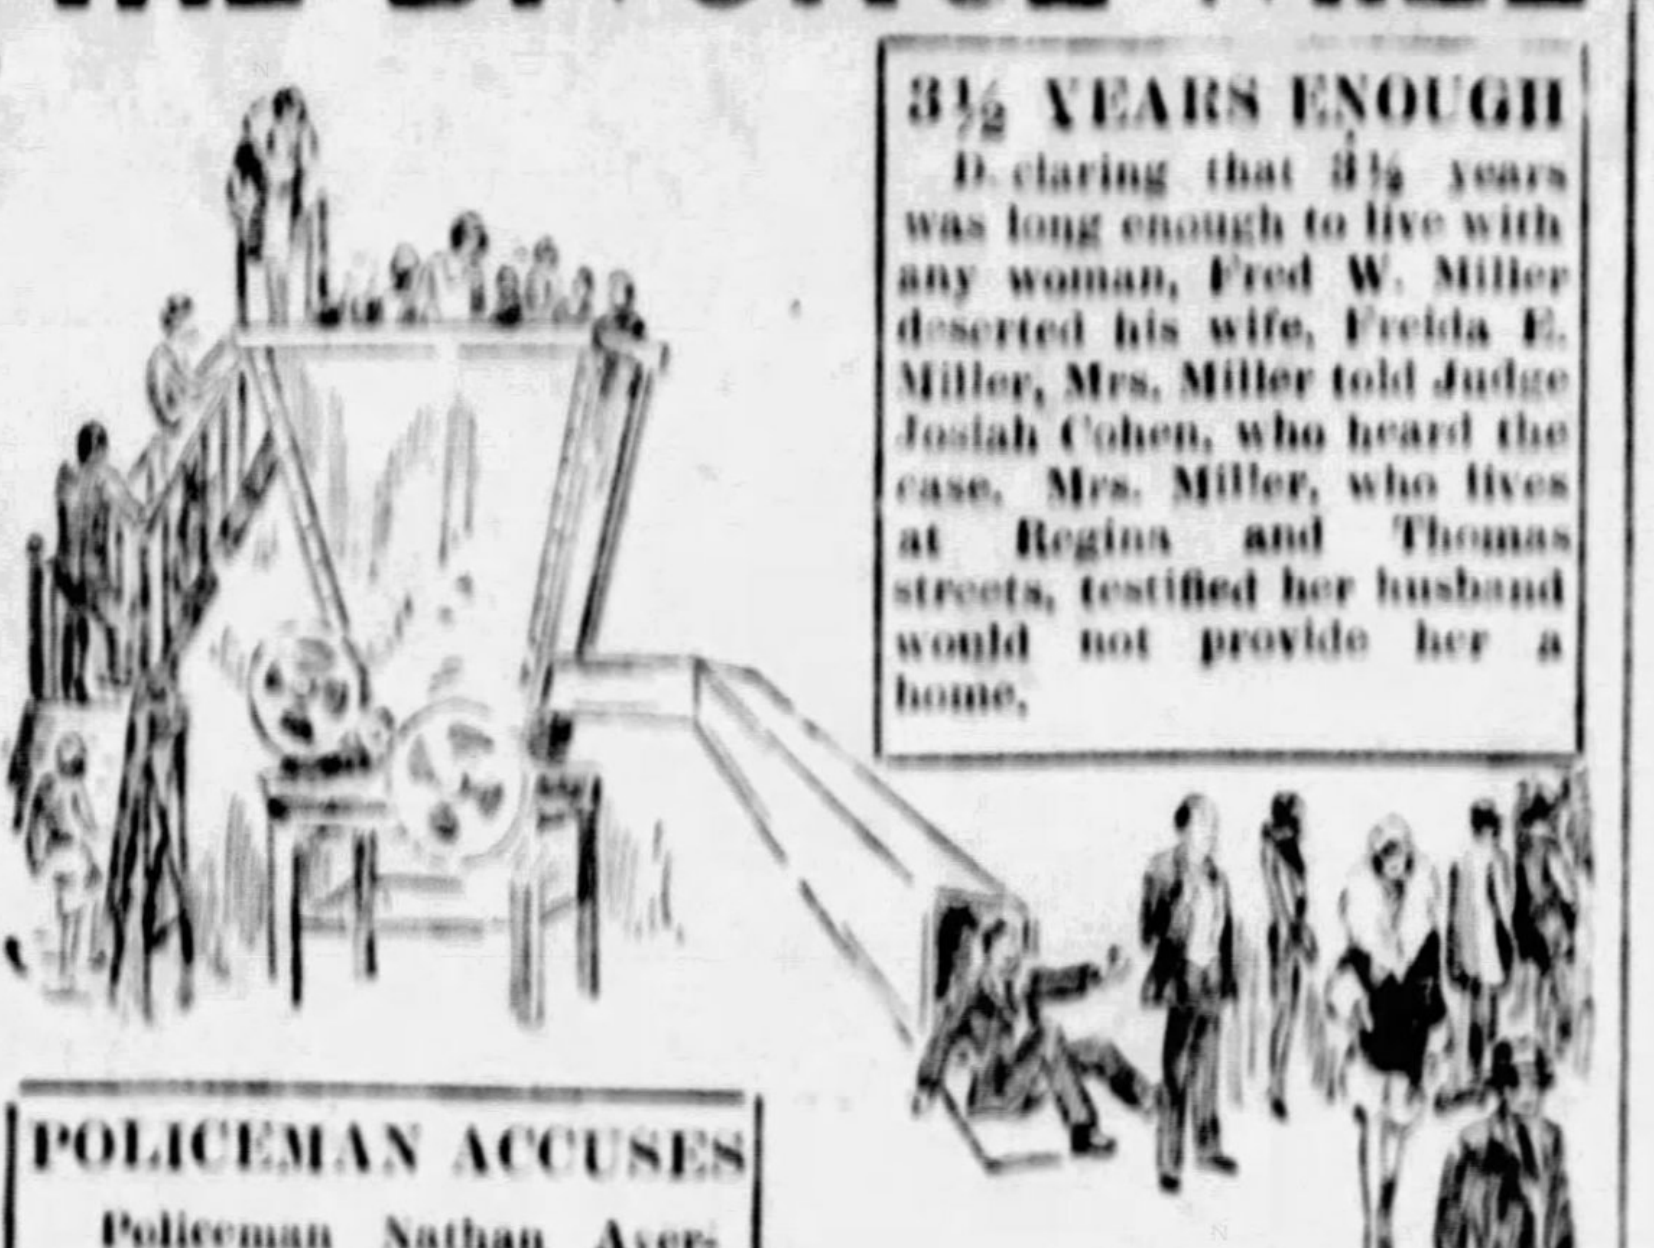
THE DIVORCE MILL



3½ YEARS ENOUGH

Declaring that 3½ years was long enough to live with any woman, Fred W. Miller deserted his wife, Freida E. Miller, Mrs. Miller told Judge Josiah Cohen, who heard the case. Mrs. Miller, who lives at Regina and Thomas streets, testified her husband would not provide her a home.

POLICEMAN ACCUSES

Policeman Nathan Averbach wants a divorce from Esther Averbach, because she threatened to kill him, threw dishes at him, refused to cook for him and made his life miserable, he testified in Judge Josiah Cohen's court. Averbach lives at 41 Marion street, and charges his wife with cruel and barbarous treatment. He said that on one occasion Mrs. Averbach removed the cartridges from his revolver and told him if she could not get him one way, she would another. Asked for an explanation through the court and his counsel, Coleman Harrison, Averbach said that removal of the cartridges would have endangered his life, if he had gotten into a jam in the performance of his duty. He said that throwing dishes at him was an almost daily occurrence.

JAIL MURDER SUSPECT AS MORON

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 7.—Fred Drew, 20, Negro, who was arrested as a suspect when the mutilated corpse of Thelma Young, 17, was found on the southwestern edge of this city last Friday morning, was sentenced to serve six months in the workhouse by Alderman J. F. Carmichael yesterday, when he pleaded guilty of indecent acts.

A check of Drew's movements showed that he could not have been at the scene of Thelma Young's murder. When questioned by officials, however, Drew confessed to indecent acts and to having followed white women. It was because of these known tendencies that he was taken into custody as a suspect when the Young murder occurred.

The search for the murderer of Thelma Young continued today without apparent progress. Many supposed clues are being reported to the officials and each of these is being traced. Nothing tangible to work upon has been uncovered.

'BOOTLEGGED' BEAUTY HIT

Alleging that the Andaluzian Salon at 429 Penn avenue is giving her "Arden facial treatments" without her permission and in violation of an agreement reached between her and the operators of the local beauty shop, Florence N. Lewis, of New York, whose business name is Elizabeth Arden, in Common Pleas Court yesterday asked that Helen E. Taylor and Ann Wimberly, operators of the salon, be restrained from using the Arden name.

It is charged that the owners of the Andaluzian Salon entered her school in New York and learned the Arden treatment. They agreed not to enter any business in connection with this treatment for a period of two years after leaving the school, but they failed to live up to their agreement, it is charged in the bill.

QUARREL ENDS IN STABBING

Stabbed in the abdomen by a companion with whom he was quarreling last night in Chatham street, Samuel Grillo, 30, of 1907 Colwell street, is in a critical condition in the Mercy Hospital. Police say they know the identity of the man, who did the stabbing and expect to arrest him today.

Grillo and his companion had been standing in the street for more than an hour when they finally began to quarrel. Police say a witness told them that Grillo struck the other man, who then drew a stiletto, and stabbed Grillo.

THUG CAPTURED AS POLICE FIRE

Captured after a chase of several blocks in Knoxville and Carrick late yesterday, during which police fired at him several times, John Martin, 17, last night admitted, police say, to at least 15 robberies in the South Hills district. Martin, who until recently lived in Cleveland, said that the robberies had been committed during the last six months.

A squad of police led by Lieut. Joseph Hennigan caught Martin after they had been called by residents, who noticed the man loitering in the neighborhood.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mothers Pick November and December Dates for Buds

DEBUTANTE parties are becoming few and far between these days, and the time is not far away when the mothers of next season's crop of "buds" will decide to announce which dates they have taken for the November and December of 1928. Very often these dates are chosen two years in advance—I know of at least one mother who has her daughter's coming out date selected for 1929—and most of them are announced the winter before so that there will be less chance of confusion and overlapping.

What is probably the last big debutante party of the winter is scheduled for tonight in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, when the William R. Scotts of Northumberland street will give a dinner for their niece, Anne King Scott, daughter of the J. King Scotts of Devon road. Anne had her formal coming out dance Monday night, you remember. At tonight's party, the tables will be decorated with mounds of pastel-tinted spring flowers, with tall candles, and after dinner the young people will join in the club's regular Saturday night dance.

Palm Beach continues its reign as the ultra-fashionable Florida winter resort, and has already attracted a number of Pittsburghers this winter—most of them, of course, being "regulars," who have homes there. The Alfred Goddard Kays have opened their house and expect to remain there until late spring, while David W. Kirk and his daughter, Mrs. Robina Kirk Quinby are at their cottage in Royal Park.

It is expected that the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Maitland Alexander will join the cottage colony shortly. After their children return to school early this week, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander will decide definitely when they will go South.

COLLEGE CLUB TOLD OF FAMOUS SHAWLS

Even in the College Club, which manages to have weekly programs consistently up to standard, that, presented yesterday by Mrs. Henry Hornbostel, was of unusual interest. Mrs. Hornbostel's talk concerned itself with shawls, which are her hobby and of which she has a collection, begun by her mother more than 50 years ago. In the collection are severable valuable French Paisleys, which were woven on looms in imitation of the hand-made Kashmeres, one of which is also included among the beautiful possessions. The collection of shawls has been the pastime of queens, Mrs. Hornbostel stated, saying that Queen Victoria possessed what was probably the finest collections in the world. This is now in the South Kensington Museum. The famous Kashmere shawls, finer than their successors, the modern Cashmeres, were so fine that they could be drawn through a ring, but have not been woven for 200 years, the speaker stated. Mrs. Hornbostel's Kashmere is more than 700 years old.

For the tea, which concluded the afternoon, hostesses were Mrs. Curtis C. Mechling, Mrs. James R. Dunsford, Mrs. Ernest A. Hall, Mrs. Fred R. Kleibacker and Miss Grace Steiner.

The "Gift Day" pageant, held annually by the Girl Reserve department to formally present the younger Y. W. C. A. members' share to the yearly budget fund, was held this afternoon in the auditorium at Central branch. The ceremonial, arranged with the rainbow and pot of gold theme, was carried out by a cast of 13 girls with rainbow colors in costume and script. Miss Gertrude Bradshaw, chairman of the grade school committee, acted as "The Inquirer," and Miss Jane Layton was the "Color Fairy." Dances, music and speeches were given by the other members of the group as a part of the pageant.

As a finale, delegates from the 86 Girl Reserve clubs in the metropolitan area, representing approximately 4,500 Girl Reserve members in the schools of the city, brought their clubs' contributions to the foot of the rainbow. The gift will be turned over Friday to the budget fund at the opening of the drive for $40,000. The pageant was held under the direction of Miss Hazel Belle Withrow, metropolitan Girl Reserve secretary of Pittsburgh.

A group of young business women who have taken an active interest in the Y. W. C. A. program in Pittsburgh through various centers, held a dinner rally last night at Central branch and completed plans for their participation in budget week. Bethlehem, spoken of as "the only place in the East which makes one want to linger," was entertainingly described by the Rev. William C. Kelty before the Crafton Woman's Club yesterday afternoon. Father Kelty commented on the fact that Bethlehem has changed little in 2,000 years. Lazy camels are still to be seen and many things, among them the tomb of Rachel, are as they always have been. MUSIC
New York Philharmonic Orchestra
Syria Mosque

PROGRAM.

Overture to "Oberon"	Weber
Scherzo Fantastique	Stravinsky
"La Valse"	Ravel
Symphony in D minor	Franck

I. Lento; Allegro non troppo
II. Allegretto
III. Allegro non troppo.

Willem Mengelberg and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra gave us a most stimulating concert in Syria Mosque last night. Two numbers were old standbys in Pittsburgh but were dressed in liveliest colors; the other two numbers were new to us and spoke for themselves in the most cocksure manner. Mengelberg is not too favorable to these new scores, but he gives these as fairly as he gives his pet classics.

In Stravinsky's Scherzo I immediately forget the bees that were supposed to have inspired this composition, and watched his marvelous play of color. I can see this work only as an experiment that was to find fulfillment in this leading Russian's later works; in design it is complete though too lengthy to remain interesting throughout. In spite of its grace, after the pastoral loveliness of the trio the design extends too far beyond the limits of good taste. But we can listen to Ravel's valse many times more. It is Ravel after the great war, and I wonder if he did not have his ear very close to the earth during this terrible struggle. I could hear the heavy camions rolling to the front, and could see the devil and death jeering through the bars of every measure while we were dancing our way to perdition. It was a valse for monsters, and music by one who is stretching his arms far beyond the limitations of his school. It is an adventure and the most interesting composition from the Frenchman who has not yet been caught in the web of atonality.

The Franck symphony we have heard played by a sleepy German, by the Quaker City showman, by the aristocratic Bostonians, but it remained for the Netherlander to explode that misnomer "mystic" forever in regard to this symphony. Mengelberg seemed not impressed with the manner of Franck's thought, but with the thoughts themselves. He played with greater intensity than we have heretofore known in his conducting, and was gloriously aided by every member of the fine orchestra. Likewise in his "Oberon" he gives little thought to the legend of the opera, but devotes all his broad imagination to the romance within the score. I could mention the virtuosity of the horns and trombones, but only because they had unusual opportunities in a concert without one dull phrase.

ALVIN PLAY MANAGER THEATER'S FORMER BOY

John Rankin, manager of "The Shanghai Gesture," attraction in the Alvin the last two weeks, has felt singularly at home in that theater. Small wonder! He began his theatrical work in the Alvin at the age of 12 as a boy in the office of Manager John B. Reynolds. It was through Mr. Reynolds that he obtained his first position "on the road" with a theatrical venture. U. S. CALLES AID CRITICIZED Protesting the good will the United States is extending to the Calles government in Mexico, and the close relations that are being established by Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, a letter has been sent to President Coolidge by the Pittsburgh Diocesan Council of Catholic Women, representing women in 10 Western Pennsylvania counties.

The letter, signed by Mrs. Teresa M. Molamphy, president of the council, states that the religious persecution by the Calles government is the worst in history. The letter also calls upon the government to show its disapproval for the present Mexican government.

NIXON DANCING BAN LIFTED

Dancing and vaudeville entertainment were resumed last night at the Nixon Restaurant, Sixth avenue, when Director James M. Clark of the Department of Public Safety lifted the ban prohibiting these activities, at a meeting with the owners of the establishment. The ban was lifted a day sooner than the Director had originally planned. This was done after the owners told the Director they had obeyed his closing order last Saturday night. The usual Saturday afternoon tea dance will be held today, and tonight the usual two shows will be presented.

FASCINATING NEW SPORT

Is the favorite pastime of Miss Schnall, champion all-round woman athlete of New York, who finds the "love-thirty" game on skates very thrilling. She is very skillful as she performs in one of the New York rinks. It's a great game to play anywhere except on an icy sidewalk.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Alex Fox.

WHILE the football players of the University of Pittsburgh are traveling homeward from Pasadena, where they held Stanford to a 7-to-6 score last Monday, university athletic officials here are making arrangements for a royal reception to the squad. The gridders will arrive in Pittsburgh next Tuesday morning, and after a welcome to Coach Sutherland and his warriors by officials, alumni and students preparations will be completed by the athletic council for a big banquet in honor of the team.

The banquet, an annual feature of football at Pitt, will be on a larger scale than ever on this occasion. It will be held at the William Penn Hotel next Saturday evening, starting at 6 o'clock. It is expected that almost 1,000 persons will be present, including a large percentage of the 500 Pitt letter men residing in this vicinity.

AS USUAL a feature of the Panther dinner will be the election of a captain for the football season of 1928. For almost six weeks after the close of the regular schedule on Thanksgiving Day the players were kept busy preparing for the game with Stanford, so that little has been heard of the captaincy matter and the customary advance tips as to who is likely to be chosen for the honor have been lacking.

Andy Guarino.

However, the indications are that either Alex Fox of New Castle, left guard on the 1927 team, or Andy Guarino of Greensburg, right end, will be elected, for the reason that they will be the only regulars holding over from the 1927 eleven who will be seniors in 1928, and the captaincy is rarely given to any one except a senior.

There are five others on the 1927 squad who will be seniors next fall, but as none of them was a regular

PANTHERS WIN 7TH IN ROW

By JESS CARVER.

DR. H. C. CARLSON, coach of the University of Pittsburgh varsity basketball team, is clipping tonsils in his Braddock tonsil-removing parlors today with reckless abandon. The genial medico is right merry, and as he snips and slices at tender throats and stubborn vocal cords, he hums happily to himself.

An he has a right to his happiness. Last night, in the stadium pavilion, his Panthers crashed through the most stubborn opposition they have met this season, downing Lou Andreas' Orange-frocked varsity of Syracuse University 45 to 24 before a crowd of 4,000 fans. It was the seventh consecutive victory for the Panthers, who are undefeated so far this season.

The Panthers were face to face with a valiant and highly dangerous foe last night. Syracuse jumped away to a four point lead, and during the first half, held Pitt fairly even, leading for half of the period. Sensational shooting on the part of Charlie Hyatt and Stanley Wrobleski gave the Blue and Gold a chance toward the end of the 20 minutes and they pulled away to a 23-16 lead at half time.

But the second half, with the Panthers hitting on all cylinders, was as easy as the first had been tough. Pitt rolled up 22 points while Syracuse was battling strenuously for a meager eight. Capt. Eismann, a good center, had hung under the basket during the first half and turned snappy and accurate passes from his teammates into five baskets. In the second half, Pitt was on to him and he got one "sleeper shot" and that came too late to restore the waning Syracuse pep.

Pitt won, as the boys say at the race tracks, "going away." They were outplaying Syracuse in every

Bucs Play Cougars Tonight

By CARL W. SHATTO.

THE diminutive but dynamic defense combination of the Pirate hockey club, which has not permitted an alien goal in the Bucs' last three games, will be put to the acid test tonight when Detroit's prolific ice scorers invade Duquesne Garden to battle in defense of their lead in the American Section of the National Hockey League race. In turning back Montreal, Boston and New York American attackers without a tally the Pirate guardians dealt with heavyweights; tonight they will deal with middleweights who rival the incomparable Canadiens for speed and deception, middleweights who lead the American Section in scoring and who are second only to the Canadiens in the matter of piling up points.

George Hay, whirlwind forward who was the leading offender in the 6-1 walloping the Cougars handed the Pirates in the season's inaugural here, is the main cog in the Detroit attack. Hay leads the American Division in tallying, and in J. Sheppard he has an able who is crowding the scoring leaders.

Yes, the Cougars probably will do some scoring, but it is not likely that they will do all the tallying. Statistics show that Detroit has one of the weakest defense combinations in the circuit. In the matter of permitting enemies to tally only the Americans and the Black Hawks have been more generous.

On the occasion of their last meeting, in Detroit, the Bucs and Cougars battled to a 3-3 deadlock, and it is not unlikely that a similar free-scoring fight will be on tap tonight. Since climbing out of the cellar the Pirates have ruled no worse than an even-money choice against any club in the circuit, and they are regarded as having at least a 50-50 chance against the Michigan invaders.

The probable lineup:

Pirates.		Cougars.
Worters	G	Holmes
Burke	D	Noble
McCaffrey	D	Traub
Milks	C	Walker
Darragh	W	Hay
McCurry	W	Aurie

Pirates spares—Drury, White, Cotton, McKinnon and Smith. Detroit—J. Sheppard, McLaughlin, Frazer, Cooper and Brown.

LOUGHRAN RETAINS TITLE

By MURRAY LEWIS,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Knocked down twice for counts of nine in the first round Tommy Loughran the light heavyweight champ gave a masterful exhibition of scientific boxing in defending his title against Leo Lomski of Aberdeen in Madison Square Garden last night. Tommy took 13 of the 15 rounds.

That first round was almost as senational as the seventh round at Chicago when Gene Tunney arose from the canvas in time to save his heavyweight title from passing back to Jack Dempsey.

Leo took Thomas by surprise when the champ was still cold and not expecting the hurricane assault that burst upon him.

The round opened tamely enough. Tommy was jabbing lightly when Lomski suddenly rushed in and planted a left to the jaw. Down went the champ on his back, his heels flying high in the air. Despite the force of the blows that floored him, the champion was cool and collected as Lomski charged in with both hands flying after he arose.

Tommy was outboxing and outhitting his opponent and fast cutting down the lead when he ran into more trouble. Leo put over a right hand cross counter that landed flush on the angle of the jaw. Once more the champion went down as though shot through the heart. He got up at nine and the bell soundtd before Lomski could do further damage.

From that time on Loughran held the fight safe showing all the skill of a Jim Corbett. He baffled his opponent's attempts to rush him by pumping straight lefts into his face. Tom was not satisfied to try merely for a victory on points. He landed flush on the button. But the rugged Lomski was too tough to be dropped. He took Tommy's best punches hesitating only momentarily before charging in again.

In the eighth round one of Tommy's right crosses opened up a deep cut over Lomski's left eye. This seriously handicapped the Aberdeen scrapper but did not stop him from forcing the pace.

SOLONS TO EXAMINE JACK'S HAND AGAIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Jack Sharkey's delicate hands are to come in for a final inspection next Tuesday. The Boxing Commission yesterday ordered Sailor Jack to present himself on that date to show what cause, if any, he may have for a last-minute run out on Tom Heeney, whom he is slated to fight in the Garden Friday night.

The solons are determined to remove any lingering doubt as to whether or not this oft postponed match is to materialize according to schedule.

TARTANS' CHARGE DRAWS FIRE

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY is ready to meet Pitt and Carnegie Tech in athletics.

In a formal statement from John D. Holahan, manager of athletics of the school on the Bluff, to the writer denial is made that the Dukes play any night school or special students on their varsity teams, as alleged by a Carnegie Tech authority in these columns the other day, and, since the latter said that this condition was the only barrier to the opening of athletic relations between the two institutions, the way appears to have been cleared for such competition.

The Tech official said the Plaid would waive the freshman and migratory rules, but must insist that the Dukes refrain from using students who take only one or two hours of study a week.

HEATED REPLY MADE

Manager Holahan's reply is hot and to the point. He says:

"In your column of the fifth inst. a communication to you alleged that Duquesne University carries students on its various athletic teams who do not have regular hours of study or who attend night classes.

"There is no man taking part in any intercollegiate sport representing Duquesne University who is a night school student or carries less than 15 hours per week. The initial move of Elmer F. Layden in his proposed program of expansion of athletics at Duquesne was to raise the standard to the same level as the larger universities. This would necessitate the elimination of any students other than those who attend day school and carry a minimum of 15 hours. These proposals have been carried out to the 'nth degree.

"It is the desire of the university authorities that our athletics keep pace with the scholastic expansion, and we hope that the steps thus far taken will be productive of the desired results."

CALLS FOR SHOWDOWN

Holahan further supplies the following statistics:

The Dukes have available for their varsity athletic teams 350 day students in the accounts school, 227 in the college department, 175 in pre-medical and 220 in pharmacy. No law school students, of whom there are 800, are eligible, because they are night school students, their classes beginning at 5 p. m., and none of the 1,000 accounts, finance and commerce students, attending night sessions, are available, either.

Manager Holahan adds that the records of the Dukes so far as their athletes are concerned are open to all other institutions at any time, so that the latter may satisfy themselves as to their eligibility, and he calls upon Tech to make good its offer to arrange games with the Bluffites now that night school students no longer are permitted to compete.

Tartans Meet W. Va.; Lose to D. & E.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 7.—With a defeat at the hands of Davis-Elkins in the opening game of the season last night at Elkins scored against them, the Carnegie Tech varsity basketball team arrived here this morning for the game with West Virginia tonight, the opening Big Four contest of the year.

West Virginia defeated Davis-Elkins, 30-23, earlier in the week, and as the Senators hung a 49-20 lacing on the Tartans last night, things look very drab indeed for the Skibo five for the game this evening.

Tech never had a chance last night. They were behind from the start, and ound the defense of the Senators as baffling as was the offensive. McKinney, forward was the leading point getter for the West Virginians, registering nine goals from the field and sinking a foul shot for 19 points, almost as many as were accounted for by the entire Tech team.

For Tech, Capt. White performed in fine fashion, getting four baskets and playing a good defensive game.

The lineup:

D. & E.—49.		Tech—20.
McKinney	F	High
Foscover	F	Crum
Christy (C.)	C	Bond
Barrett	G	White (C.)
Kochenderfer	G	Letzelter

Substitutes—D. & E., Miller, Brown, Wallace, Warren; Tech, Gemmil, Ponerance.

Field goals—McKinney 9, Foscover 5, Christy 4, Barrett 3, Wallace, Kochenderfer, Crum, Bond 2, White 4, Letzelter.

Fouls—D. & E., 3 out of 9; Tech, 4 out of 7.

Referee—Ridgely, W. & J.

DUKES MEET THIEL

While West Virginia and Carnegie Tech are opening the Big Four season with a game in Morgantown, Duquesne will be prying off the 1928 Conference lid by engaging Thiel College at Greenville, Pa.

BUFFALO GETS PACKARD

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—The Buffalo club of the International League has acquired the services of Frank Packard, former third sacker for the champion Greensburg Generals of the Pennsylvania League, who had a tryout with the Pittsburgh Pirates last fall, it was made known here today.

NOTES of the BOXERS

THE fans who saw Garfield Johnson, the Negro light-heavyweight from Seattle, show so mrch class in defeating George Gemas at Motor Square Garden recently are looking for him to surprise Maxie Rosenbloom when he clashes with the New York veteran in the wind-up in the same ring Monday night. They believe the Black Streak has the speed and science necessary to overcome the clever Maxie, and, with the prospect of a close, hard fight, they have bought heavily in the advance sale of tickets.

Rosenbloom will be here tomorrow and will work out in the Motor Square gym in the afternoon.

Detroit's amateur boxers meet a local team in a series of bouts at the P. A. A. tonight.

The entry list closes tonight for the open amateur fistic tournament to be held next Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the Palisades Rink under the auspices of the McKeesport Athletic Club.

Answer to query, F. B.—John L. Sullivan's last fight was a three-round, no-decision bout with Tom Sharkey at New York, August 31, 1896.

Jack Barry and Joey Novak turned in victories at Erie last night and Tug Phillips came through with a draw in a six-round bout with Maxie Strub. Barry defeated Joe Trippe and Novak stopped Joe Bernoia.

Barney Dreyfuss Added to List Of Grandads

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The sun doesn't have to be shining these days to give Barney Dreyfuss his share of happiness. Whistling with the abandon of a school boy, Barney might have given the impression that another star of the skill of the Waner boys had been landed by the Pirates, but the reason was more important. The owner of the Buccos had been notified officially that he was a grandfather.

Mr. and Mrs. Dreyfuss were made grandparents Wednesday night through the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. William E. Benswanger of 5539 Beacon street. The mother of the baby, before her marriage, was Eleanor Dreyfuss.

Jones Declines Gift Of $50,000 Home

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—With a gesture as decisive as one of his crisp drives, Bobby Jones, the genial young Southerner who owns among other titles that of American Amateur champion, last night brushed away that question mark which has lately been menacing his amateurism.

Bobby made it known officially that he has declined to keep that $50,000 house which was given him by his Atlanta admirers.

News of Bob's renunciation was given out from the United States Golf Association here yesterday. It was supplemented by another interesting statement, also official, to the effect that the executive committee of the National Association had investigated Bobby's case and found that he was entirely within his rights in accepting the gift.

The young super-golfer's action is looked upon as an emphatic answer to the critical attacks of golfers in America, and in England, where Bobby has twice won the open championship.

The two official statements were the work of the annual meeting of the National Golf Association which took place at the Hotel Astor yesterday.

Bobby's statement was as follows: "The action of the United States Golf Association approving the gift to me of a home by my friends in Atlanta has been brought to my attention. This action confirms my understanding of the amateur rule. At the time the gift was tendered and accepted I had no thought that it was not entirely proper. I have since had opportunity to consider the matter very carefully and have reached the conclusion that the interests of our great game will be served if I do not retain the home.

"I am taking this action with due appreciation and gratitude to my friends of their generous expression."

TIE FOR CUE LEAD

Jones defeated Greenwood, 50 to 39, and Carter won, 45 to 32, over Currie in games in the local three-cushion billiard league last night. Greenwood and Carter now are tied for the lead in the league standing with 11 victories and five defeats each. No games are scheduled tonight.

GEHRIG SIGNS WITH YANKS

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Lou Gehrig, star first baseman of the New York Yankees and Babe Ruth's chief rival for home run honors, has signed a three-year contract with the world champions.

This information was given out from American League baseball headquarters here last night. No figures as to the size of Gehrig's salary were divulged, the official statement being merely a terse announcement that Gehrig had signed for three years.

Schenley Gets Fine Start in Race

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

SCHENLEY, South, South Hills and Allegheny won victories in the opening games of the City League championship campaign yesterday afternoon. South High and South Hills turned in impressive victories, having attached to them a tinge of the unexpected. Schenley High set out on a drive for its fourth City League title and Allegheny downed Perry High in such convincing fashion as to indicate great strength.

Westinghouse fell before the attack of the Bellefielders. The score was 48-19, and Schenley, well coached and with a sustained and driving attack, led from the start. Johnny Moore was the star of the game, running up a total of 16 points on seven baskets and two foul shots.

South turned in a somewhat unexpected victory over Peabody, 31-25. Goldstein, South forward, led in the scoring with seven goals from the floor. Noonan, Peabody captain and forward pressed him close with five goals.

South Hills rode through to a 60-31 triumph over Oliver, giving the latter's championship hopes a rude setback. The Hills five ran wild, its attack being led by Dering, who caged 16 goals.

Allegheny showed promise of being a championship contender, and a strong one, with a 39-18 win over the stubbornly fighting Perry quint. The North Siders played consistently good basketball in their win.

'Sweetenin" The Ship of Romance

By Beatrice Fairfax.

THERE'S a story by Rudyard Kipling called "The Ship That Found Itself," which is well worth a second reading. It tells how a fine ship was built and made ready for her first voyage in a certain Scottish shipyard.

The owner's daughter, having christened the brave new ship, went over it admiringly with the master, praising its beauty and strength.

But the master shook his head.

"It takes more than christenin' to make a ship," said this canny Scotchman. "Every inch of her has to be livened and made to work with its neighbor—sweetenin' her, we call it technically. She's a highly complex structure with tissue that must give and tak' accordin' to her elasteecity. Nothin' but a gale will do it. . . We must go down to the deep waters."

Having taken on a goodly cargo, the ship departed on her first voyage across the ocean to New York, amid sirens and horns blown by her sister ships in the harbor as friendly greetings and congratulations.

All went well for a time. But presently a rough sea began to pile up. One "gray-headed wave" climbed leisurely over the ship's straight bows and "sat down" on the capstan, which has been newly painted.

The wind came up. The deck-beams creaked. The stringers of the port and starboard deck strained. Frames rumbled, the rivets whispered. Finally the seas lifted the screws nearly out of the water.

"Help!" gasped the pistons and choked. "Never in the history of navigation has such a calamity overtaken one so young and strong!"

Night came and the storm increased. Every inch of the ship seemed to gasp and push and strain and creak.

"Great boilers, how it rains!" "Every wave is headed for our bows! It's awful!"

"I don't know what I'm expected to do!"

"When in doubt, hold on!" advised the steam.

These were the various wails and exclamations in ship language. When in the midst of the storm a wonderful discovery was made.

"We have found," shouted the stringers, "that the inward pull of the deck beams and the outward thrust of the frames, knits us more closely in our places and enables us to endure strain."

In time the storm cleared, and the new ship arrived in New York harbor with banners flying on schedule time, amid blowing horns and bands playing in honor of some departing celebrity.

"Very good!" said the master of the ship. "Not bad for a first run!"

And suddenly the new ship realized that she could do the same thing over and over, and make the ocean trip, countless times without further strain, fear or confusion. She had found herself.

I have quoted freely from Kipling's fascinating story because it may be regarded as an illustration of what happens when a young couple wed and start out together on the voyage of life.

Jack and Jill, let us say, are devoted. They are young, healthy, ambitious, not afraid to work, eager to make sacrifices for each other. Everything is in their favor.

Their wedding was a charming success. The honeymoon began auspiciously.

A trip to Palm Beach—what could be lovelier! How Jack and Jill pitied the rest of the world, who were not newly wed—and on a honeymoon!

Yet before that fortnight at Palm Beach was over, there were moments when Jill almost wished Jack were a little different—in some ways! Jill preferred quiet evenings to everlasting dancing at at the club.

And that sophisticated widow—an exquisite dancer—Jack certainly did enjoy dancing with her! Jack, on his part, was a bit puzzled by some of his bride's odd little moods, and once he found her in tears—why, he could not imagine.

The years that followed brought moments of despair to Jill and of irritation and worry to Jack.

Today, a son and little daughter gather with Jack and Jill about the roaring open fire in their living room. Their house, set in its lawn and flower garden, is the pride and joy of Jack and Jill and Jill and Jack, Jr.

A short time ago, business reverses came. It looked for awhile as though the house, the car, the children's pet pony—all their comforts might be swept away on the wave of financial disaster. But the ship of romance weathered this gale also.

"I told Jack," Jill confided to me the other day, "that I could be happy in two rooms, if necessary, with him and the children, as long as we have each other and he loves me."

Her sweet face was radiant as she spoke.

The ship of romance of Jack and Jill has found itself. It has gone through the "sweetenin'" process. It has weathered storms from without and discord within. Because their marriage was well considered, suitable, founded on true, unselfish love, it has been able to withstand strain and endure. Jack and Jill know all about each other now—faults as well as graces—and still they care. Such affection grows deeper with the years.

Faith and affection and patient work will, let us hope, bring your ship of romance safely into harbor, with Your Man as Captain, and yourself and the "wee ones" as mate and valiant crew!

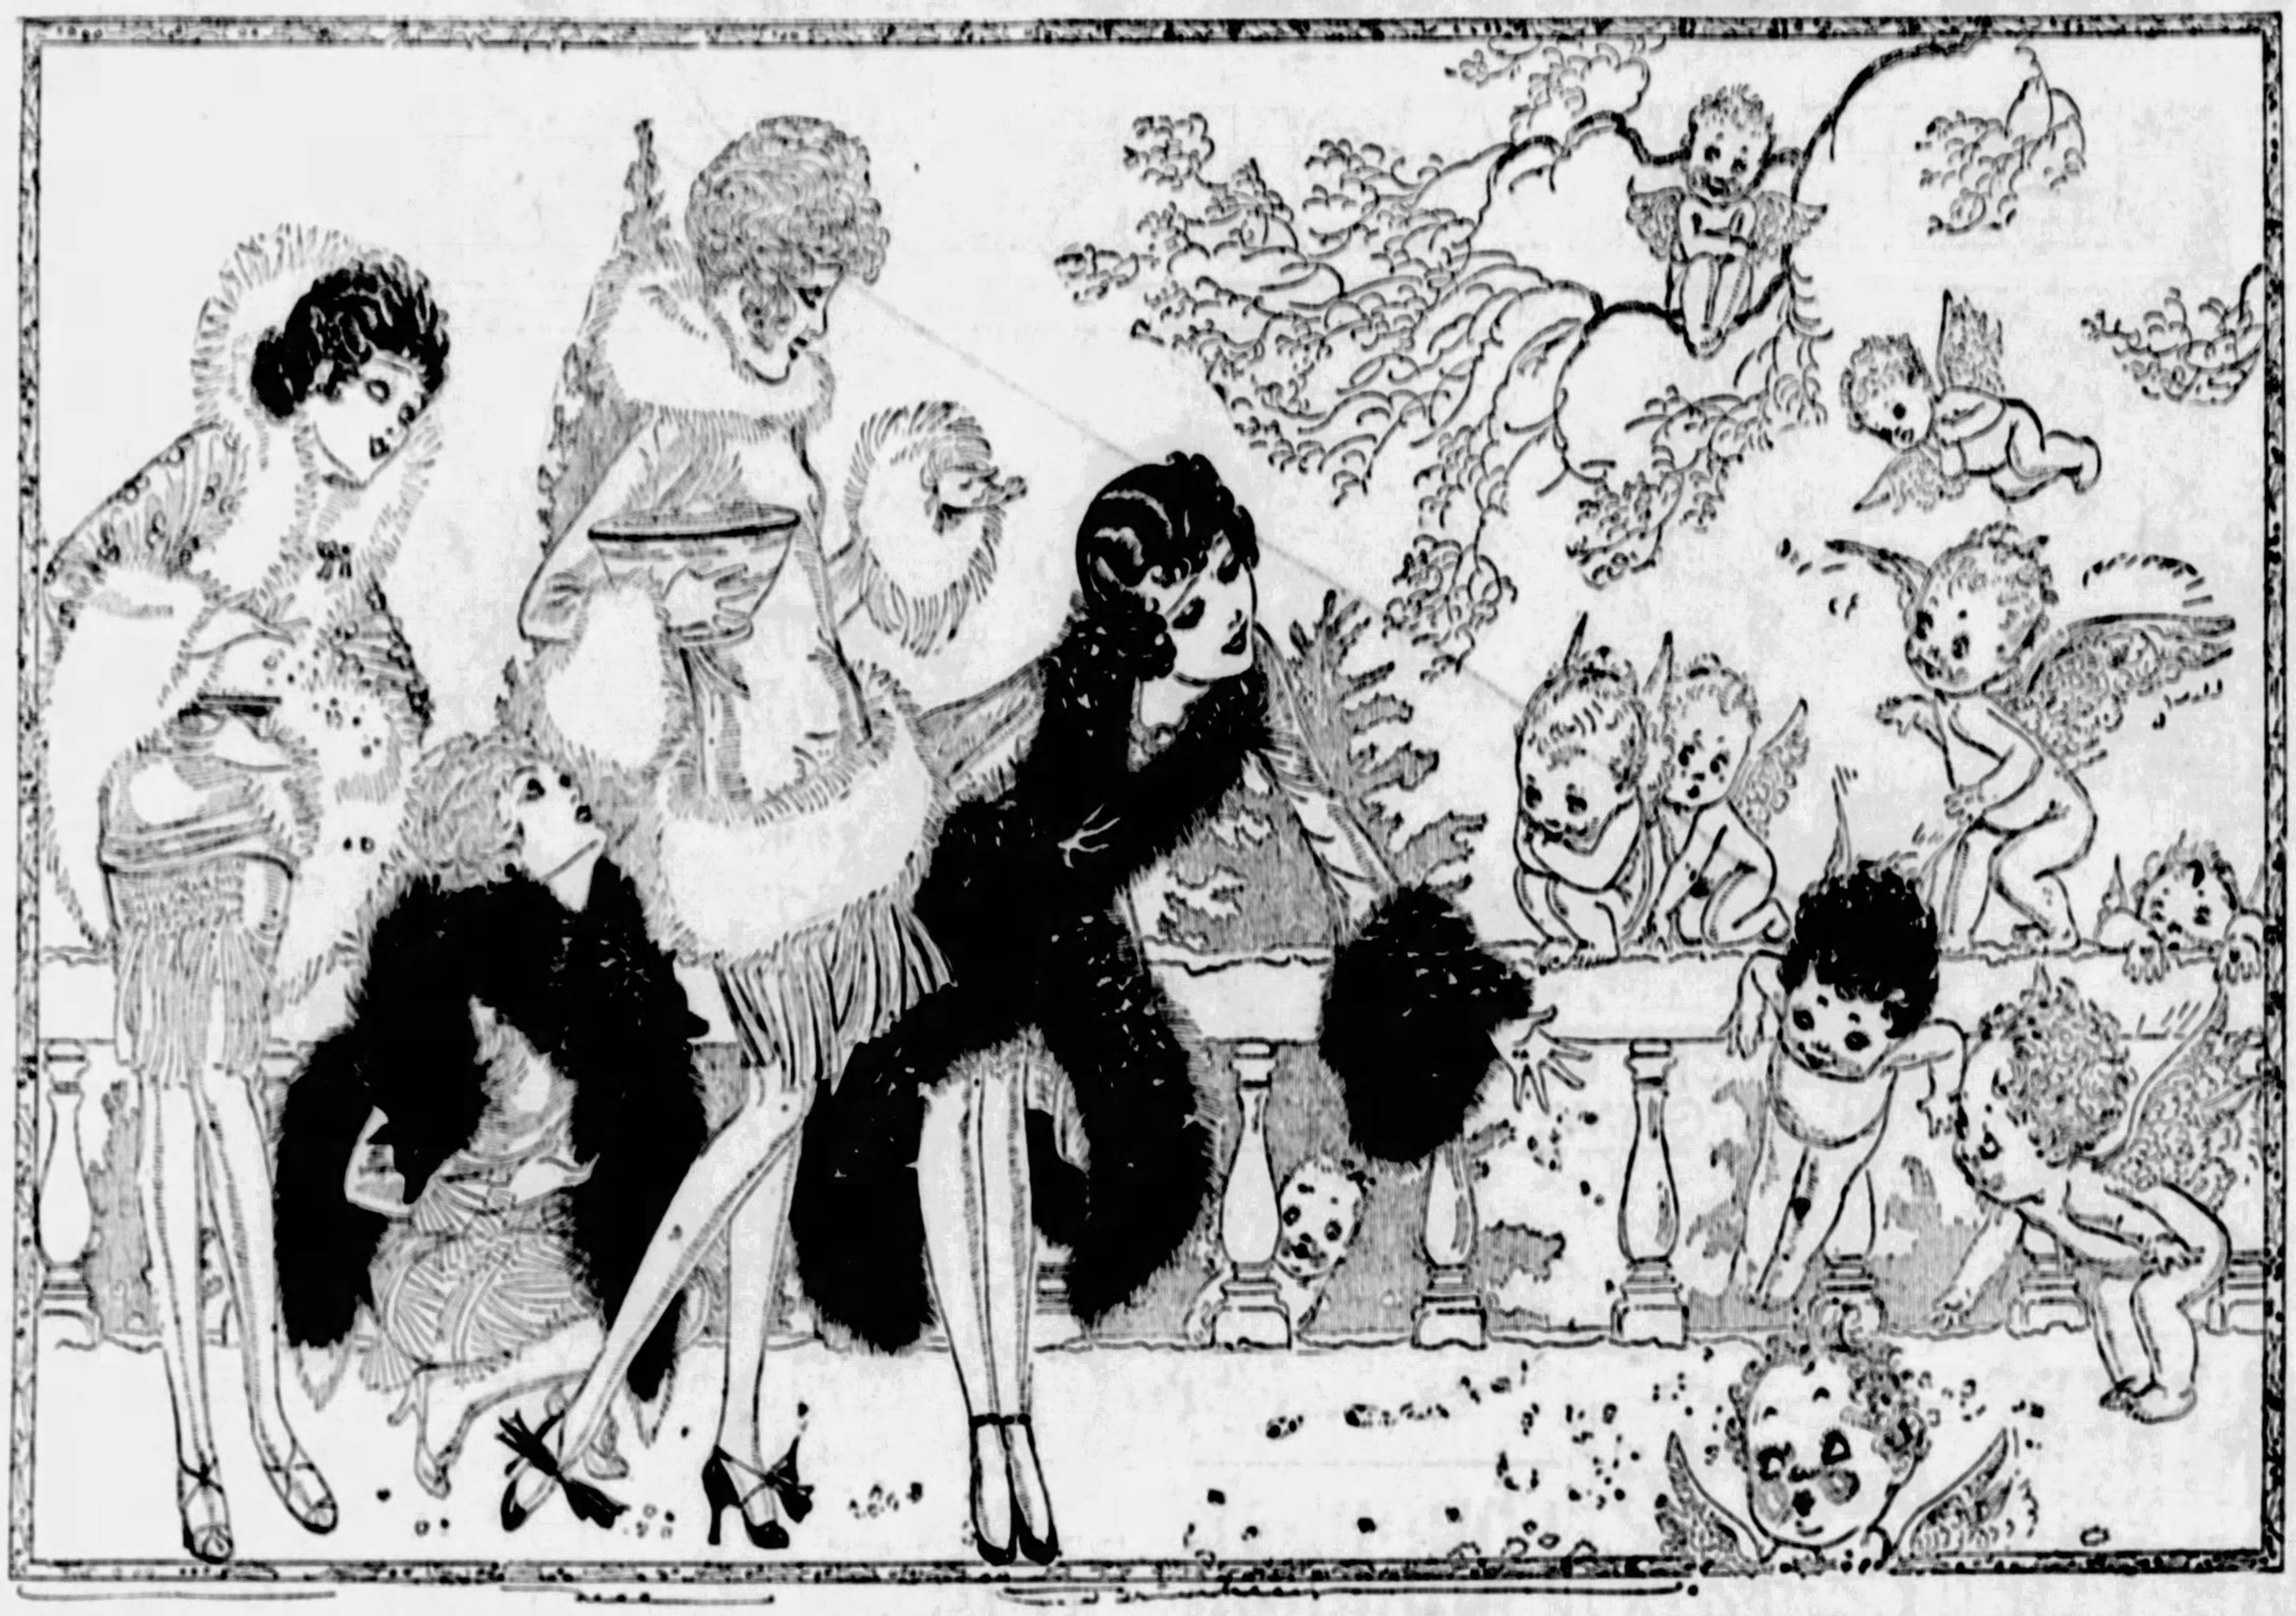
THE MISSES BEAUTIFUL AND THE SNOW-BIRDS

Drawn By NELL BRINKLEY



THERE is Love-in-a-Mist. Love-in-Spring. Love-in-Despair. Love-in-the-Clouds. Love-in-a-Cottage. Love-in-a-Palace. And there's Love-in-the-Snow.

Love is a butterfly in the Summer. But he doesn't die with the green leaves, or go sleep-fast through the Winter. He turns into a snow-bird! But unlike the bird who sang "pee-dee-dee" in the old peach tree and wouldn't let the little girl knit mittens for him, HE will flock gladly in through the first cozy door that is opened to him. And stay forever; IF not expected to live in a cage. An open cage-door is his idea of an invitation to die. He had rather live in the snow on the few crumbs he can pick up here and there.

Love's a tame little bird—but shy of the word possession. You can touch him with a finger—but a hand closed round him is too much. He will infest a balcony with a Lady Bountiful and food upon it. He will gladly come inside by the flame of your fire. IF THE FRENCH WINDOW IS NEVER LOCKED. And if with his bright eye he sees it isn't, it is more than likely that he will ruffle his wings no more in the cold winds of the open sky!

The world is always whimpering about Love and the wounds they get of him. "Unstable! Nothing in him," they shout. But how poorly has the world of men and women handled Love! Not one in ten thousand will give him the thought, the patience, that they will a business they want to make successful. And he, the cheerful thing, will live on charity and a few crumbs. They expect such glory and such a happiness to come to them from him as is in nothing else in all the world; and yet they treat him shabbily. They call him the most wonderful thing in the world and use him as the most common.

Lady Bountiful, give more than a crumb to the Snow-Bird on your balcony. He will live on cold comfort. But he will fill your house with the Song of Love, on understanding!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY MEN MAKE LOVE

WHEREFORE, my Daughter, do men continue to make love unto women, and to pursue them with flatteries and petting and applesauce and sweet nothings!

For, lo, many men have come unto me sighing that they are weary of women and sick of love!

Yet, do they continue their philanderings, unblushingly.

Go to. There is an hundred reasons why men continue to woo women; and the greatest of these is HABIT.

HELEN ROWLAND

For, alas, even as some men have only one after-dinner story, and others only one collar button, many men have only one line of chatter for women. And kissing a damsel is to them but second nature and a matter of form.

And some men make love because they fancy themselves Great Lovers, and seek to practice their skill. For every woman is to them but another conquest and another sentimental experiment; and NO damsel escapeth them!

And other men make love because they are filled with a secret conviction that every damsel EXPECTETH it. And to disappoint a woman would be a breach of etiquet. Therefore do they kiss every damsel out of pure courtesy.

Behold, many men make love to a woman because they suspect in their hearts, that if they do NOT woo her, some other man WILL. And no man can endure that any other man should beat him at his own game.

And more men make love because it is easier to kiss a woman and tell her how wonderful she is, than to explain to her why they do not especially care to kiss her.

Lo, some men make love because for a brief moment they are overcome with infatuation, and filled with the illusion that it is LOVE from which they are suffering. Yet, upon the next morning, when they have regained their nerve and their composure, they are smitten with remorse—and the damsel seeth them no more!

Thus do all men continue to make love unto women, so long as their hearts are not entangled.

* * *

But when a man findeth himself truly IN LOVE, his tongue cleaveth unto the roof of his mouth, and he closeth his lips lest he commit himself. And only by main force and artful subtlety can an admission be extracted FROM him!

* * *

For verily, verily nothing so crampeth a man's style and wrecketh his love-making, as Love, itself!

Protect the Baby Against Kisses

DR COPELAND

IN looking over a little book about babies the other day, I found one chapter devoted to "Dont's." Ordinarily I'm interested in "Do's." When a thing is forbidden, instinctively we feel we want to do it.

Of course, we don't feel this way about it when it comes to the baby. No sacrifices are too great to be made for this precious member of the family. So, if we can learn something from enumerating a few dont's," we will not take them amiss.

Instinctively everybody wants to kiss a sweet baby. That impulse is born in every heart. Unfortunately it is not a good thing to kiss the baby on the mouth. If you want to kiss it on the back of the neck I assume there is no harm in that.

But you must bear in mind it is pretty easy to infect an infant. The trifling cold you have means nothing to you, but it is very important to keep the baby from having a cold. That is one of the reasons why the baby should not be kissed.

The first "don't" I shall mention then is "don't permit your baby to be kissed."

It requires a lot of tact to deal with one's friends. You will have to be careful how you restrain the enthusiasm of the visitor who grabs up the baby and is about to give it a kiss. Perhaps the mother should begin now to formulate what she is going to say when this benevolent assault is attempted.

How would it do to say this: "A foolish old doctor has said my baby must not be kissed. Of course this sounds like nonsense, but I suppose I must follow his instructions. So for goodness' sake don't kiss the baby or the doctor will make an awful fuss about it!"

In the language of the street, I'm willing in this particular matter to be the "goat." Every little baby is too precious a morsel of humanity to gamble over and there is a chance of infection every time the youngster is kissed.

One of the things we have learned about colds, influenza, bronchitis, earache and similar conditions of a catarrhal nature, is that they are carried by the moist secretions of the nose and throat. Sneezing, coughing and loud talking throw a spray of moisture into the air. If this comes from an infected person it means that every tiny droplet is teeming with the germs of disease. Even though you think you may be free from any suspicion of infection it is unwise to take a chance on passing trouble to the baby.

Answers to Health Queries

E. J. M. Q.—Is it advisable to sleep between sheets? If so, why?

Daughter in College

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

BECKY finished high school and wanted to go to college. Most of her friends were going to college, and of course she wanted to go, too. Her parents had less than half enough money to send Becky off to school in good style, so they finally decided that their young daughter might as well go to the State University, where tuition was free.

Becky was talented, witty and exceedingly pretty; vivacious, daring and very appealing. She created a sensation among the college men when she stepped off the train. And that very day they began rushing her.

Now, Becky was not accustomed to swarms of young men clamoring for her smiles and dances, and the attentions went to her head.

Every time she went to her room to study somebody called her to the telephone. Every time she walked into a classroom boys greeted her covertly but fervently. Every time she walked out of a classroom a young gentleman walked on either side of her, with others trailing along behind. On the evenings that she was permitted to have "dates" she had only to pick and choose her man.

On other evenings she answered soft whistles outside her window. Quite often she and her roommate lowered a small basket on the end of a string and then pulled it up full of good things to eat. All of which was delightful, exciting and demoralizing.

Every now and then she forgot a dormitory regulation or broke a college rule. The dean of women was a straight-laced, old-fashioned person, and Becky's conduct filled her with concern and suspicion. So the minx—aided and abetted by her admirers—began inventing ways of outwitting the dean.

Becky never did anything worse than to dine and dance with boys at the fraternity house, or to slip off for an afternoon ride with a car full of kindred spirits, but those things were forbidden. Her escapades kept her in trouble most of the time and eventually hurt her standing among her fellow students. Altogether Becky had a most unprofitable year at school.

To this same school went Barbara.

Barbara selected the State University because it offered good academic and teacher-training courses. She intended to teach, and she wished to equip herself for the profession. Barbara was ambitious, earnest, serious-minded. She was pleasing in appearance, had good manners and a sweet disposition, but she lacked the suggestion of froth and frivolity that made Becky overly popular.

Occasionally she accepted attentions from young men, but that did not interfere with her studies. She took part in college athletics, in one literary society and in one religious organization.

At the end of four well-spent years she graduated with honor.

For Becky it was disastrous. In some cases co-education is advisable, in other cases it is not. It all depends upon the temperament, the inclinations and the nature of the girl herself.

For Beauty Know How To Relax

By Maria Jeritza.

MOST of us take ourselves and life too seriously.

Possibly you have determined upon all sorts of edifying work and study for 1928. And this ambition is fine.

But may I suggest a very important resolution, which possibly you have omitted from your list? Resolve to relax as well as work. Determine to leave a margin each day for rest, for doing nothing blissfully. These moments are often among the most valuable in life. Leave also a part of each 24 hours—even if only half an hour—for your favorite kind of lazy fun.

On the face of it, this may sound like a revolutionary suggestion. "She is advising us to be lazy!" I can hear some horrified reader exclaim.

Just a little more systematic laziness and recreation is what most of us need. You will return to your work with new inspiration after even a very short rest. A good laugh will clear your mind of cobwebs.

A bracing walk is a wonderful aid to relaxation. An occasional game of cards or a dance rests some women. Often a change of work will accomplish the same object. I know a woman who, when she wearies of her round of housework, busies herself with a correspondence short-story course she is taking. Writing is her hobby, so this interval of changed work brings renewed enthusiasm and a new viewpoint.

Half an hour of complete rest, stretched on a sofa or bed, in a darkened room, after the noonday work is done, before bathing and dressing for the afternoon, is a life saver for many a hard-working wife and mother.

One evening each week of laziness, with perhaps a little more than usual attention to the beauty ritual, is one business girl's recipe for relaxation. Usually, she burns her favorite Oriental incense on this evening, and on rare occasions, as a special luxury, she nibbles on a box of milk chocolates.

In a galloping age of frantic rush, worry and hurry, the woman of poise and relaxed nerves wins, other things being equal.

Needless to say, your hour of relaxation should not be selected from the portion of your time which belongs to another. But, if you wish, you can fit moments of relaxation and recreation into even the busiest day.

A woman with nerves at the breaking point and tired eyes is neither charming nor beautiful. Her pep is obviously forced. Rest and relax. Poise is coming into fashion.

Lily Shuns Sue Cain's Advice to Stay Away From Lexington

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lily Lexington is the spoiled and only daughter of the Cyrus Lexingtons, who have always lived far beyond their means. She realizes her highest ambition when she becomes engaged to Staley Drummond, a rich bachelor older than herself. Downtown to meet her chum, Sue Cain, she is attracted by Pat France, a taxi driver. She asks him to drive her home. On the way she learns that he is cab-driving to raise money to finance a new kind of piston ring he has invented. Pat tells her that he is selling the cab to raise money for the piston ring, and she miserably wonders how she'll see him after that. Staley tells her the age-difference between them doesn't matter and tenderly kisses her. Lily realizes that she hates his love-making. Mrs. Lexington announces the engagement just as Lily's made up her mind to tell Staley that she doesn't want to marry him, and she feels like a mouse in a trap—helpless. The Lexingtons get a chauffeur, who turns out to be Pat. Lily confesses to her mother she loves him and leaves home. Mrs. Lexington decides to take matters into her own hands to get rid of Pat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"WELL, that slays my soul!" she cried in her breezy, slangy, breathless way. "I can't believe you're making such an idiot of yourself!—Look here, Lily, where are you?"

Lily told her.

"I'll be right down," Sue answered, and hung up the receiver before Lily could say another word.

In less than half an hour she was there. Her new, snow-white roadster with nickel trimmings—Sue called it her Turkish Bath—came tearing up the street and stopped with a jerk and a shriek of brakes before the low, white picket fence in front of the house.

Sue, little and dark and flashing in bright red hat and dress, came flying up to the door and rang the bell as if she were trying to wake up the dead.

"My dear, you've lost your mind, haven't you?" were the first words she said when Lily opened the door to her and she stepped into the hall.

She stood still and looked at her with narrowed, searching eyes, as if she never really had seen her best friend before in all the years of their friendship.

"Does anybody but me know that you're here in this house?" she asked when Lily led the way into the neat parlor, with its starched white curtains, its vases of dried flowers on the mantel, its gray-green plush chairs with lace doilies pinned on the backs and arms of them—a queer stiff, old-fashioned room that was a peaceful place in spite of its out-of-style furnishings.

"Mother does."

Sue breathed a great sigh of relief. "Well, thank heaven for that!" she said sharply. "Now, look here, Lily, you can't stay here. You've got to go home and think this over . . . I'm your best friend, and I love you heaps, and I won't let you do this wild thing."

Her big, black eyes pleaded with Lily. "Why, darlingest, you hardly know this France! I don't mind his being poor, in a way, but I don't believe he cares so awfully much for you. I can't help remembering that day down town when he wouldn't let you get into his cab and drove off, leaving you standing in the rain." Her face was filled with very real distress.

Lily shrugged her shoulders. "Well, of course, I don't know how much he cares about me, but I think he cares a great deal, Sue," she said. "He says he did his best to keep me away from him because he knew I wasn't the type of girl he ought to marry—and, Sue, I did chase him! Really, I did!—I just followed him all over—" She gave a nervous little giggle at the thought of the way she had pursued poor Pat, in the early days of their friendship.

"You'd better let me drive you home," Sue advised. "You stay away from him for a week or two, and then see if you still feel this way about him. You might change your mind, you know."

Lily shook her head with such violence that the little sun-gold curls around her ears, shook too. "And he might change his, too!" she cried. "No, I can't take a chance on that! Sue, I'm going to marry Pat tomorrow. My mind's made up, and I want you to be with me—just as you were going to be my maid-of-honor on June the tenth. Will you? Sue, somebody's got to stand by me in this! I love Pat just as much as you love Jack Eastman, and I'll never be happy until I'm married to him. He's everything in the world to me."

Sue looked out into the neat, humble little street beyond the snowy curtains. Her eyes were thoughtful. "Poor Staley," she said, "I'm sorry for him."

Then she looked at Lily. "Of course, I'll stand by you. You know I will—but I don't feel happy about it the least bit."

Her doubt had its effect on Lily.

When she was gone she sat in the little cool, darkened parlor, and thought over the things that Sue had said. . . . Pat had left her standing in the misty rain that day in Albemarle street! And she had pursued him!—

Then, like a ray of sunshine, came the thought that he had gone to her father's house just to be near her during the weeks before her marriage. He had cut her picture out of the paper and put it in his mirror where he could look at it when he shaved and dressed. . . . He had never even telephoned Elizabeth Ertz once after he had glimpsed her that day in Albemarle street.

He came into the little room and stood inside the door for a minute, looking at her. "I can't believe you're here," he said, quietly, and the last of her doubts was swept out of her mind.

She went into his arms that waited for her, and stood close to him, happier than she ever had been in all of her life that had been crowded with happiness.

"I love you," he whispered. He was trembling. "I've never loved anyone else and I never shall."

"How could I have doubted him?" Lily asked herself. "And how can I ask for anything better than this? What's money? Nothing!"

That was the way she felt about it—then.

At 6 o'clock the Frances had the meal they called "supper"—the meal that would have been served at 7 in the Lexington house and called "dinner."

That night Mrs. France set the table in the dining room, with its red wall paper, its red light globes, and its golden-oak furniture.

Lily sat between Pat and Florence, and ate pot roast and carrots and boiled onions, without knowing what she was eating. She was dazed and enchanted with happiness, and she held her fork awkwardly in her left hand because Pat was holding her right one in his.

Afterward, when she and Florence were getting dressed for Sadye Jetterson's "blow out," Florence began to talk about Elizabeth Ertz.

"She'll probably be there tonight, because she and Sadye are boon companions," she said, combing her shining dark hair before the glass. "You know, she and Pat have been running around together for a couple of years."

"Yes, he told me," Lily answered. "But you don't think she'll really be at the Jettersons,' do you? Why, if I were a girl whose sweetie had dropped me for another girl, I'd never want to set eyes on him, would you?"

Florence shook her head and began to dust rose-scented talcum powder all over her neck and arms. She looked at Lily in the glass.

"You're the prettiest human being I ever saw," she said with frank admiration in her eyes. "And you have the loveliest clothes and things—" Her eyes ran over the gold toilet articles in Lily's dressing bag, and over the orchid satin dressing gown that she had slipped into while she dressed.

"You'll never live with Pat," she added, softly. "I wouldn't marry a man who makes as little as Pat does—and I'm not used to the things you're used to! I give you and Pat about six months before the crash!"

Outside, in the little street, an automobile horn honked, and then the door bell rang loudly. There was a rush of feet on the stairs, and then Pat's voice: "Lily, your folks are here to see you!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

LILY expected to see only her mother and father when she ran down the stairs, still wrapped in her orchid silk breakfast coat.

Pat followed her, but at the

PLEA FOR FREEDOM FAILS

By Universal Service.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 7.—George Remus yesterday entered the Lima Hospital for the Criminal Insane exactly three months after the day on which he killed his wife, Imogene.

Judge Charles S. Bell yesterday refused the petition of Charles Elston, Remus' counsel, for a writ of habeas corpus to free Remus pending the appeal from Judge William H. Lueders' decision that Remus was dangerous and must be confined at Lima.

Remus himself asked that the trip to Lima be speeded. Strategy was seen by some in his request, since once there, he again may enter habeas corpus proceedings on the grounds that he is confined illegally.

Remus' mood was morose as he bid goodby to fellow prisoners at the Hamilton county jail. In the auto with him for the 140-mile trip were George Connors, his lieutenant; August Bruck, a friend, and Deputy Sheriff Herman Kleine.

Judge Bell's concise opinion, if upheld, will lessen the popular appeal of an insanity plea in murder cases. He held that the verdict of the jury finding Remus not guilty on the sole ground of insanity was prima-facie evidence that Remus is insane at the present time.

ADMITS HOTELS ARE FOR SALE

A rumor that the Eppley Hotels Company has purchased, for $14,000,000, the William Penn and Fort Pitt hotels met with denial from Grant McCargo, president of the Pittsburgh Hotels Company, which owns the two hostelries. He said, however, that they are for sale, and have been for years.

"Are you negotiating for their sale?"

"There has been some talk; but no agreements have been signed, no money has been passed. You could hardly call what talk there has been on the matter 'negotiations.' A month from now there may be something to give out, though at this time it does not look likely."

The Eppley Hotels Company, mentioned as purchaser of the local hostelries, owns hotels in a number of western states. Its headquarters is in Omaha.

Kelly, who had served but a year of a long sentence in connection with the holdup of the North Birmingham, Ala., bank, is also under indictment, police say, for robbing an Atlanta, Ga., bank of $21,000.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by Havey J. Boyle

A FEW Pittsburghers are wondering what has become of him and what was the nature of his particular racket. For months he stopped at one of the better hotels here in one of the most expensive suites. In a cupboard in his room he had rigged out a complete bar even to the foot rail. There were cordials, brandies, whisky, and on tap a small keg of beer. He rose about noon every day and after his bath there followed a steady procession of attendants to his room, a manicurist, a barber, a valet, and a bootblack. Around 2 o'clock he was at last ready. His wardrobe of sports and dressing gowns was elaborate. His suits were countless. Once, after a little dinner party he gave, a friend had to restrain him from tipping the elevator boy who hauled him two floors a hundred dollar bill.

He had the manners of an Englishman, but the tone of an American. Ostensibly, he was in two widely separated pursuits. He talked of great boatloads of bananas which he shipped and then there was reference to the fur trade. His scheme and ventures thus took in widely separated territories, for if we remember correctly bananas do not come from the place where they cultivate muffs and sealskin coats. Now and then there would be a long-distance call from New York, which, recalled casually by the mysterious one, would bring in names of well-known financiers.

He is gone now—and the hotel officials would like to locate him. It appears that in a careless moment, or in the general confusion of much packing, or possibly in the dash to the depot he forgot to settle what amounted to a sizable bill. But what was his racket? That is what those Pittsburghers who had met him—just a little cautiously—would like to know. They felt all along that he was leading up to the point where he would suddenly draw out a prospectus of the banana hunting grounds or of the great seal farms from which he plucked boatloads of merchandise, but he never did.

Once, so an authentic story runs, in a bridge game in which a man, with, it seems here, every right in the world, shook his fist under Friend Wife's nose because she had not led a heart the mysterious one quit the game, observing, haughtily, he would not mingle in company where men insulted their wives in such fashion. It was probably his great preoccupation in the finer side of life that caused him to forget such a common thing as a hotel bill.

IT OUGHT to be solacing to our former colleagues in the sports department that among the (we were going to say many but decidd to go straight at the last minute) five letters received since taking on this department only one has an idea that we moved voluntarily—that a strong hand was not laid upon a fearful shoulder to push us out of sports. The significant part of this is not to be missed.

It indicates, and we trust we are right in believing that noise we hear is a few deep Amens from the sport department, that a very large part of the newspaper reading public places sports at very close to the top of all departments. And let us add in conclusion to this great paragraph that in saying that only one out of five got the proper slant on the change we do not intend to convey by any chance that the other four have, as the advertisements insist, pyorrhea, which is by no means easy to spell.

SPEAKING of letters and the number received it may interest you to know that column conductors and such take pride in the number they receive from what we call our unseen audience. And in this connection, we may as well break down and confess that during a complete absence of 10 days from all departments not one letter came in.

This was very disappointing. We had visions of an angry mob surrounding the building roaring something incoherently about Harvey Doyle.

door of the parlor she stopped and told him she would see them alone. "And no matter what they say to me, I'm not going to change," she said, solemnly, her hand on the knob.

She opened the door and went in. The first person she saw was Staley Drummond. He was standing in front of the mantel-piece, smoking a cigaret and saying something in his pleasant voice to her mother and father.

He was spruce, as always, even to the little white rose in the lapel of his coat. But his face was gray-looking and haggard and his body seemed to sag as he leaned against the mantel.

Lily looked from him to her mother and father. They were sitting on Mrs. France's gray-green sofa, with its old-fashioned lace tidies, and Mr. Lexington was holding his wife's large, white hand in his, stroking it.

He got up and stood beside his runaway daughter. He was not a very tall man—not much taller than she—but he was one of those solid, dignified people who always seem larger than they are. His arms were very comforting as he put them around her and patted her shoulders.

"Well, Lily Locket," he said, using a nickname that he had had for her since her babyhood, "do you think you're doing the right thing? Running away from your old dad like this? Marrying this fellow that you hardly know?"

Lily could feel Staley Drummond's eyes on her. He had not said a word. He just stood, leaning against the mantel-piece, and watching her as if he were trying to figure her out—trying to read her thoughts. She was dreadfully sorry for him.

And, suddenly, instead of answering her father, Lily turned to him.

"Staley, I don't know what to say to you. I don't—it's going to be awful for you, isn't it? Everybody talking—"

Staley stood up straight, squaring his shoulders. His lips smiled under the little blond toothbrush of a mustache that he wore. But his eyes were perplexed and serious. "I don't mind what people say, Lily," he said, with a shake of his head. "I can stand what they say. What I can't stand is losing you."

He suddenly turned his back upon her, and leaned his forehead against the mantel-shelf. His whole body was shaken with silent sobbing.

Lily never had seen a man cry before in her life, and she was filled with dismay and pity for him. . . . She hadn't known that he cared for her like this. Deep in her heart she had always had a sneaking suspicion that he never would have asked her to marry him if she hadn't managed things so cleverly.

She remembered now, with a certain shame, how she had told him that she never would let a man kiss her unless she were engaged to him—how she had told him how much better she liked him than she liked any other man. She had done everything a girl can do to make a man propose marriage to her—and now that he wanted to marry her, and everybody knew that their wedding day was set for the tenth of June, she was dropping him, and dropping him for another man — her mother's chauffeur.

"I'm doing a beastly thing," she thought.

For one second she was on the verge of telling him that she would marry him after all. That she would abide by her promise, and walk out of the France house with him as soon as she could pack her things.

She probably would have done it, too—pity makes people do disastrous things sometimes—but her eye happened to light upon a photograph of Pat that stood in a frame all made of little shells upon the mantel shelf just above Staley's bowed head. . . . Pat, with his eyes looking out at her from the frame, and his dark, handsome head thrown back upon his shoulders in that half-defiant way of his.

"Pat, I can't give you up," she said to him in her heart.

"Staley," she began, laying her hand on his coat sleeve, "I wouldn't have had this happen for anything in the world. When I told you I'd marry you there wasn't anybody else I cared two pins about, and then the very next day I saw Pat and fell for him. It wasn't my fault, was it?—But I'm just as sorry as I can be—"

"And you'd better be sorry!" It was Mrs. Lexington's voice, sharp and bitter. "And you're going to be sorry—sad and sorry—before this thing's over. Sorry for yourself, young lady, that's what! You're not falling into any bed of roses when you marry this France!" She sniffed loudly.

Mr. Lexington patted his wilful daughter's shoulders again. "We just want you to be happy, baby-girl," he said. "We just want to be sure you're doing the right thing for yourself. If you love Pat and haven't any doubts about him, we want you to have him."

His wife groaned. "Now, you're not saying what I told you to say to her, Cy," she wailed. "Why don't you tell her that she's got to come home with us and stay there for two or three months until all the gossip about her and Staley has blown over? That's what you promised you'd say!"

Lily's father looked as if he were ashamed of himself for a moment. "Yes, I know," he said, after a pause. "But we want her to be happy, don't we? And she couldn't have been happy the way things were going at home, or she wouldn't have come down here to be married, would she? Would she, Ellie?"

His better-half glared at him. "Well, for 22 years we haven't done anything but try to make her happy," she sniffed. "I guess that's the trouble. She's had too much. She's spoiled and wayward and willful. She doesn't know what she wants!"

"Oh, don't I!" Lily said to herself, with a glance at Pat's picture. She knew what she wanted—whom she wanted. She wanted Pat and nothing else in the world, she told herself.

"There's no use scolding me and arguing with me," she said, quietly. "My mind's made up to marry Pat, and the only thing I regret is what I've done to Staley."

He was facing her now under the orange-colored electric lights of the little parlor, and the radiance pouring down upon his face seemed to deepen and sharpen the lines around his mouth and nose. He held out his hand.

"After all, it's better to find out how you feel about me now, Lily, than a few months from now," he said soberly. "A broken marriage is worse than a broken engagement, I guess, from all I hear. Good-bye."

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

ARAB, HAVE YOU GOT THIS LIFE THING FIGURED OUT YET?
NOT ENTIRELY, THE MORE I THINK ABOUT IT THE LESS I FIND OUT!
NOW FOR INSTANCE A MAN'S WHOLE FUTURE MAY DEPEND ON A WOMAN!
AND A GIRL'S FUTURE MAY DEPEND ON A GARTER!
FUNNY, ISN'T IT?

"My dear, I'm all-of-a-DOOdah! I mean I'm ACtually so MAD I could GARgle BUTtermilk at this point because ARab SIMply SLAYS me these days with his POSitively perVERted IDEAS about LIFE and all, my dear. I mean he's STILL all het and BOTHered about the LIVing situAtion because he seems to think he's got to JUStify his exIStence or something—do you know what I mean? But even if I were as unatTRACtive and all as HE is, my dear, I HONestly don't think I'd let it WORry me, because what's the DIFF, ANYways? If you were PUT here for a PURpose and you aren't BRIGHT enough to discover what it IS, I HONestly don't see any USE in letting it GET you—do you know what I mean? But, GOSH, I sometimes WONder what it's all aBOUT—don't YOU, my dear? I mean if you could sort of KNOW what your FUture was going to be or something I think it would be quite THRILLING unless it was something FOUL that was going to HAPpen to you, my dear. HONestly, my dear, I could ROLL over and BUTter myself with disMAY at the PROSpect! I mean I REALly think the best WAY is just to forGET about yourSELF and think of OTHers, because, ANYways, it is a consoLAtion when you REALize that there are HEAPS of unatTRACtive girls who simply have NO hope at ALL of anything but the most luGUBrious kind of a future, and I think ANY girl who is an atTRACtive type should think of how much BETter OFF she is than girls who look like NOTHing HUman—I ACtually DO!"

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Homecoming Brings Fresh Perplexities

LILLIAN kept her promise "not to bother me any more" with any discussion of Philip Veritzen and the probability of my being compelled to face an emotional problem in connection with him. Efficiently she helped me to catch the first train from the city on the morning after I had concluded Junior's shopping, and against my protest—for I knew how busy she was—she accompanied me to the station. But her talk was all of her own forthcoming visit.

"Marion's train gets in tomorrow," she said. "They have a special school car well chaperoned by teachers, so I do not need to go after her. I shall meet her at the station here, and we shall have a couple of days last-minute shopping. Then we will come down to you either Friday or Saturday—probably Saturday."

"Let us hope it will be Friday," I told her sincerely, and the wish stayed with me on my journey home. Indeed it was the one bright spot in my trip, for I was so troubled over what Lillian had told me of Philip Veritzen that I was exceedingly depressed and nervous over the thought of his projected sojourn in the east end of the island. I knew he had the leisure and the means to gratify any passing fancy of his for a temporary home, and I feared that he might decide to stay all summer, with occasional trips to the city, and might expect me to hold myself in readiness for "conferences" on the work for the coming season.

Only the knowledge that Lillian would be at the farmhouse for the summer kept me from something nearly resembling panic at the prospect of my employer's proximity. I knew that I could depend upon her for aid in any puzzling problem which might arise and I resolved to erase from my mind all conjectures concerning Philip Veritzen.

But I found that resolving was easier than succeeding. When in my effort to banish the mental vision of the great producer, I summoned from my memory the figures of the "Lincoln" family, the members of whom I was sure were Transvanians, there also came flocking the recollections of young Noel Veritzen's revelation that his father was Transvanian by birth, and of the peculiar interest which the elder man had taken in my account of the strangers.

The knowledge of my employer's tense curiosity concerning my new neighbors gave a distinct filip to my discovery, as I alighted from the train at Bridgehampton, that Eleanor Lincoln, with Noel Veritzen and Mary Harrison on either side of her, was waiting to welcome me home.

I had seen the little group through the window of the parlor car, and had made the reluctant mental comment that while my husband's young niece was the more beautiful of the two girls, there was something so subtly alluring in Eleanor Lincoln's dark pansy eyes and ivory skin, something so eloquent of Paris shops in the sport suit and hat she wore, and something so elusive and yet insistent in the air of delicate hauteur and aloofness which pervaded even her friendliest moments, as to make her a much more striking figure than Mary.

That subtle withdrawal into herself was apparent to me even in the cordial words she directed to me when I had finished greeting my welcomers.

"I am only a substitute, Mrs. Graham," she said, "but I hope you won't mind. Something went wrong with one of the tires of your car just as your man was about to drive out of the yard, and I volunteered to drive over for you."

"Thank you so much," I began. "That was"—but Mary interrupted me.

"Reserve your thanks till she gets you home," she advised with a saucy little moue at Miss Lincoln. "Her car isn't an automobile, with her at the wheel. It's a monoplane. She didn't have all four wheels on the ground at once all the way over here. I've got to learn a new prayer in the next two minutes. I said all the ones I knew coming over."

Her words were apparently nothing save friendly raillery, but I wondered if I imagined that a tinge of malice invested them. There was no mistaking the sudden haughty flinging back of the other girl's head, however, but even as I braced myself to manage my awkward situation, which the thinly veiled antagonism between the two girls might engender, Eleanor Lincoln's eyes widened in horrified surprise. She whisked to the other side of me and seizing my arm, bent her head toward my shoulder.

"I—am—ill"—she said, "please have Mr. Veritzen drive, and let's get away from here at once."

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Unhappy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am 21 years old, married, and have three children. I was married when I was 15 and I don't love my husband, and cannot be contented living with him. He is mean and jealous, but I have never given him reasons to be jealous. I am good-looking and attractive and have a lot of friends. He has been running around with a couple of single girls but I have never let him know that I know this, but I have seen it myself and know it is true. We were separated 15 months but on account of the children I am now living with him. I like bowling, gym and swimming, but he won't even let me go to a movie.

UNHAPPY.

Your story should surely be a warning to young girls who want to marry too early, my dear. However, your children need a home and since the responsibility is yours and your husband's, don't you think you had better try to make the best of it? Tell him you need a few good times, and certainly bowling and gymnasium are harmless enough amusements. No personal answers are ever made.

Buttercup

DEAR MISS GALE:

As a steady reader of the lovelorn department, I wish to express my opinion on the three subjects which you do not approve of, smoking, kissing and petting. For a girl to smoke in public is one of the lowest things she can do, but a kiss now and then cannot hurt anyone, and petting I approve of to a certain extent. When a girl goes out with a fellow what is there to do but pet a little? Now, Miss Gale, don't think I am fast by any means. I have a lot of friends of both sexes. I am a girl of 17 years and I am considered pretty good-looking. I am a junior in high school, and I attend the school sports. Now I have a question I would like you to help me solve. When a girl goes to a dance with other girls, and all the girls have the dance but you what is there for a girl to do but sit there and look on? I went to a dance once and I happened not to have the next dance, so I was sitting there, and the others who were dancing just kept looking at me all the time. It seems that all my girl friends can make friends with both sexes much quicker than I. I would like to know a good remedy for that. I also want to ask you this: If a girl goes to a party or dance and she meets a strange fellow, and he asks to take you home, should she go or should she not, and if the girls keep telling you to go with him do you think they really want you to go or are they trying to make a fool of you? I would like the readers to answer these questions also Miss Gale, but please comment on my letter and answer my questions as I am very anxious to see this in print. I will sign off as just a lonesome

BUTTERCUP.

I cannot see why you think smoking in public so much more vulgar than petting. If I were you, I shouldn't go to dances with girls. It is cheapening. Wait until you are invited to go by a boy who will escort you to the dance and back home. And by no means let a strange man take you home.

A Decent Girl

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of the Lovelorn and enjoy the letters immensely. Some of these girls who indulge in smoking, drinking, petting, etc., who think they are right in what they do are rather mistaken. I have tried both ways, Miss Gale, and find that being decent is by far the best plan. No, I'm not "old fashioned" and am popular among both sexes, do not drink, smoke, pet or neck, but do not think a kiss is harmful once in a while to the man you love, even if you're not engaged. A word to "A Perfect Gentleman": Yes, my dear sir, there are a good many young ladies in Pittsburgh. I happen to reside in a suburb of Pittsburgh and associate with a lot of young ladies who are ladies. I've been trying to find a decent gentleman who has good looks, personality and common sense and believe I have found one, although I am not positive. I do love to dance, but not excessively and would not neglect my studies for a dance or a date. Here's hoping you find a decent girl. Miss Gale, what should you think when you had gone with a fellow all summer, had written and suddenly his letters ceased? I don't know whether my letter was lost or whether his was and am rather worried. Should you ask a boy in after 11 o'clock? What should you do to entertain him if you ask him in? How can you show a boy you are interested in him when he acts as if he were interested in you, but was afraid to approach you?

A DECENT GIRL.

Why not write one more letter, and if he does not reply to that, then try to forget him. Don't ask a boy in after 11 o'clock. It is your privilege to invite a boy to call on you, you know.

Little Weary Girl

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl of 17 and in high school. All the boys in my neighborhood like me and want to go with me; even all the men pick at me, but I wont pay them any attention. There is a boy who wants to go with me, but he is very bashful. Sometimes he will speak to me and ask me if he can get me certain things as candy, scarf and other things, then sometimes he wont even speak, but he gets angry when even he sees me talking with another boy. Do you think I am too young for him to come to see me?

LITTLE WEARY GIRL.

You are old enough to go out occasionally with boys. However, this boy has no right to be angry when you have other friends. He must like you.

Man Hater

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl in my twenties and do not believe in smoking, drinking or petting. I have been going with fellows over a year, but lately I never go out with them at all. It seems that all they care for is hugging and kissing, and to me that is disgusting so I am turning to be a man hater. If a fellow asks me for a kiss before he leaves I never go with him again, so they tell me I am hard to get along with. Aren't there any nice men around here? If so, I have failed to meet them, and I have been out with pretty many.

MAN HATER.

Of course there are, my dear, and they say they cannot find girls who do not expect to be kissed. You are sure to meet your ideal some day.

Character

By LUCY LOWELL

THE idea that the person of honesty and high-mindedness and simplicity of standard is a rare—almost an extinct being—seems to be gaining ground among those of a certain sort. The ultra modern sort.

"That's his art," seems to be the smart thing to say of such a one. And the implication is that the atmosphere of integrity is assumed for a purpose, to be laid aside when it interferes with general living.

Try to tell those sophisticates, so-called, that there are honest people in the world, people who are kind because it is their nature and not because they want something of those they are kind to, and they laugh. Tell them that people are fine because it is easier for them to be so than to be hard and uncivil and unscrupulous and they maintain that you, yourself, are assuming a pose.

Or, at best, they will say, "Who'd believe it? In this day and age when 'do others before they do you' is the watchword, who would believe it?"

Of course they overlook the fact that nobility of character is, in itself, an end. The one who has it does not need the acclaim of the world, for he knows for himself that he is sincere. All this is important.

"Virtues," wrote Emerson, "are in the popular estimate rather the exception than the rule. There is the man and his virtues . . . My life is not an apology, but a life. It is for itself and not for a spectacle. I ask primary evidence that you are a man, and refuse this appeal from the man to his actions. I know that for myself it makes no difference whether I do or forbear those actions which are reckoned excellent. I can not consent to pay for a privilege where I have intrinsic right. Few and mean as my gifts may be, I actually am, and do not need for my own assurance or the assurance of my fellows any secondary testimony.

"What must I do is all that concerns me, not what the people think. This rule, equally arduous in actual and in intellectual life, may serve for the whole distinction between greatness and meanness.

His Son's Toy Nets Millions; Leaders at School Climb.

By B. C. FORBES

WHENEVER a very big position is filled I try to find out if its new holder distinguished himself in any way at school or college. Investigation reveals that, more often than not, men who land $50,000 a year jobs did make a distinct mark at school, not always in scholarship, but in some way which denoted qualities of leadership. Indeed, the distinctions gained take all sorts of forms.

One man who early won fame as a New York banker made money at college by organizing an orchestra and managing it extremely successfully. A leading toy manufacturer earned his way through college by giving exhibitions of "magic," in which field he was a leader without a second. W. R. Hearst discovered his forte while at college; he transformed the Harvard Lampoon from a dismal financial failure into a profitable proposition.

Athletics form the most common vehicle for demonstrating leadership characteristics. Robust health is so essential to the modern business giant that thorough athletic training at college promises to become an even still greater asset in the future. The latest big vacant financial position in New York has just gone to a former Yale football player, Joseph R. Swan. He succeeds, as president of the Guaranty Company, Harold Stanley, chosen a J. P. Morgan & Co. partner.

If you want your sons to succeed in life, encourage them to forge ahead to leadership in some direction while at school. Leadership apparently begets self-confidence. And, of course, to earn leadership it usually is necessary to exert earnest, persistent effort. If you are an employer, dig into his school record when you consider a man for a very responsible position.

THE Chicago and New York newspapers have featured a story describing how Ruben H. Donnelly, now a successful Chicago publisher, has just sent checks totaling $645,000 to pay off, with interest, $300,000 of debts incurred when a stock exchange firm of which he was a member failed 22 years ago. Mr. Donnelly was not, of course, under the slightest obligation to make good these bankruptcy debts.

Such incidents are not rare. Not only have we such classic examples as those of President Grant, Mark Twain, Sir Walter Scott, but there are many others which never came to the surface.

I am not sure that Theodore H. Price's extraordinary achievement has ever been published. His big cotton firm failed years ago, went through the courts and had its affairs settled. Mr. Price quietly went to work, toiled unceasingly, earned money and finally invited all his old creditors to a luncheon. The place-cards consisted of checks for the total amount of the old debt, as I understand it, a million dollars.

QUEER, isn't it, the little things which sometimes alter the whole course of one's life? Here's an instance I got at first hand the other day.

One evening a young business man found his boy playing with a new toy. He discovered it was a crystal radio. Before bedtime the father had become even more interested than his 9-year-old boy. The next day, and the next, the vision of its possibilities haunted him. He promptly hunted around for the best radio obtainable. It intensified his enthusiasm.

"I'm going to get into this magical new business," he announced to his wife.

Today that young man, still young, is known as the "Ford of the Radio." I understand that he makes more radios than any other man or company in the world.

He is Powel Crosley, Jr., president of the Crosley Radio Corporation. His boy's new toy proved the Aladdin's lamp which, rubbed tremendously, vigorously, has yielded him a fortune in the millions.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The cotton market opened barely steady today at a decline of 9 to 12 points under liquidation and local selling apparently based on the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and talk of mill curtailment in some parts of the south.

March contracts sold off to 19.25c at the start, but offerings were comparatively light and prices soon steadied on trade buying and covering. Some Wall street buying was reported, probably influenced by the firmer tone of the stock market, and prices just about recovered their initial losses. The market was comparatively quiet but steady at the end of the first hour.

Private cables said the advance in Liverpool had been checked by fair offerings, but that spot demand was still good and the textile position encouraging.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 109,000 bales against 178,000 last year.

NEW YORK CLOSE WITH COMPARISONS

STOCKS TOSSED HIGH BY BULL CHARGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A wild outburst of bullish enthusiasm took place at the opening of today's stock market. Montgomery-Ward opened with a block of 12,000 shares at 129, up 4½ points and a new high record, and General Motors opened 2 points higher at 138 on an initial sale of 8,000 shares. Early gains of a point or two were recorded by New York Central, Texas and Pacific, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Mullins Body and American Smelting.

Short-covering accelerated the advance. United States Steel opened with a block of 5,000 shares at the spread-opening price of 152⅜-¼, up 2 points. General Motors and Montgomery-Ward ran into a little profit-taking, but the rest of the list surged forward in impressive fashion. Radio Corporation, International Match preferred, American International and International Nickel established record high levels on gains ranging from 1½ to 4 points.

General Electric, Allied Chemical, Beechnut Packing, American Steel Foundries and Greene Cananea Copper all advanced 2 points or more, and more than a score others climbed a point or so. Rails moved forward in sympathy with the industrials, but the gains were not as large, Frisco common, Western Maryland, Baltimore and Ohio and New York Central being the early leaders.

Foreign exchanges opened slightly reactionary, with sterling cables quoted at $4.87⅝.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Steel Ingot Output Higher.

December steel ingot output in the United States totaled 3,150,345 tons, against 3,101,764 in November and 3,484,766 in December, 1926, the American Iron and Steel Institute says. For the year 1927 output was 43,010,314 tons, against 45,936,201 tons in 1926. Operations in December were at the rate of 74.81 per cent capacity, against 73.41 per cent a month previous and 81.94 per cent in December, 1926.

Coke Independents Cut.

Independent coke makers in the Connellsville region have posted notices of a reduction in wages to the 1917 scale of $5 a day. Reductions are by companies that did not cut wages a year ago. No labor trouble is anticipated over the cut.

Trade Reviews Optimistic.

Weekly business reviews see nothing in the first week of the new year to disturb the feeling of optimism which recently appeared in industrial and business lines. General business, however, is somewhat slackened by inventory taking.

Slight Rise at Seminole.

The Seminole area for 24 hours ended at 7 a. m. Friday produced 343,364 barrels from 1,066 wells, comparing with 336,140 barrels from 1,063 wells Thursday and the peak of 527,400 barrels made July 30.

Mellon Deposits Expand.

The statement issued by the Mellon National Bank at the close of business December 31, 1927, showed an increase of $23,490,000 in deposits during the year. On December 31, 1927, deposits totaled $168,904,000, as against $145,414,000 on December 31, 1926. This extraordinary growth of deposits in a single year is encouraging evidence of the stability of Pittsburgh industry.

BROKE WORD, BOND ORDERED

"He said that too often," was the retort of Mrs. Elizabeth Kazmer, of 227 Munson avenue, McKees Rocks, when her husband, John Kazmer, told Judge James R. Macfarlane in Criminal Court that he was willing to return and support her. They were married in October, 1925, and he deserted her in two weeks, being brought back recently from Flemington, W. Va., on a charge of failing to support her and their 2-year-old child. Judge Macfarlane gave Kazmer 10 days in which to provide a bond of $1,000 to insure an allowance of $8 weekly, with an alternative of going to the workhouse to support the family on the 65 cents daily granted by that institution.

United Engineering Continues Rise

A sensational uprush in Carnegie Metals featured the week-end short session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange this morning. Several thousand shares of the stock changed hands on the advance, which carried the price into new high ground for all time.

The spurt today was not accompanied by any new news concerning the company and was thought to be a continuation of the move which began several weeks ago when Pittsburgh was informed of the successful operation of the concern's new silver mines in Mexico, which are located about 200 miles from the old Carnegie Lead and Zinc property, which was abandoned some time ago.

Accumulation of the stock has been in progress here for several weeks, chiefly in anticipation of the directors authorizing dividends at an early date. It is said a substantial profit applicable to the stock is being returned monthly, and with the improvement in the price structure of the non-ferrous metals, there is confident belief that once dividends are inaugurated the company will be in a position to maintain payments indefinitely.

United Engineering crowded the Carnegie shares closely for the spotlight position in the market this morning. There was a resumption of buying in Engineering at the opening gong and the scarcity of the shares at anything near yesterday's closing was clearly evident. At the end of the first hour the stock had risen to a new high record at 61 and there was no sign of profit-taking on a scale sufficient to impair the new position.

The general list was firm in reflection of the strength in the two leaders and while advances were not wide, the tone of the market materially improved.

SHOTS and PASSES by Julius Levin

BUCKY BRACARELLI, star of the Kingsley House team in the first half of the West Penn League race, has cast his allegiance with the Siano Club of the Pittsburgh & Ohio Valley League and will be in uniform Monday night when the Sianos meet the Somermans.

With the addition of Bracarelli to the lineup, the Sianos now have two former Kingsley House stars on their roster, Palumone, center, having been signed two weeks ago.

Bracarelli and Palumone are capable and experienced basketball players and they should add considerable strength to the Siano lineup.

The Somermans likewise will present a newcomer, Eddie Klein, last year with the Duquesne Saltzers, having signed a contract.

Monday night the Somermans will be out to get revenge for a defeat suffered at the hands of the Sianos earlier in the season.

DRIBBLES

Eager to eliminate what little dissension that remains within their ranks, the Sianos have chosen Vane Wallace, former Morry star, to direct the club. Wallace is lining up a group of youngsters that should keep the Sianos in the thick of the running for the second half championship.

Several clubs in the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League are endeavoring to sign Harry Levin, star forward of the Doc Gordons and Kingsley House.

The Duquesne Lafayettes, champions of the Allegheny County League last year and almost certain to repeat this season, stand out with the best professional clubs in this city. There is nothing in the County League that compares with the Scarlet Hurricane when it comes to playing the popular winter indoor sport.

Braddock and its environs are elated over the strong comeback being made by the Braddock American Legion team in the Allegheny County League. The O'Donovan charges have been showing a steady improvement in their teamwork and are scoring victories over the best of them.

The Enoch Rauh club will have another strong attraction at Columbus Temple next Tuesday night when the Braddock American Legion is met in an Allegheny County League contest. The game marks the first appearance of Braddock at Columbus Temple and a large crowd is expected.

The Goose Goslins are eager to book games abroad during the next two weeks with strong first-class teams. Teams desiring this attraction call Manager Charley Paske at Lafayette 4626-R or Hemlock 0493.

The South Side Binkeydinks are open for games with junior and midget teams. Call Hemlock 1123-R and ask for Louis.

Junior teams are desired by the Jordan Club for attractions at home and abroad. Call Hemlock 0235-J.

The Bobby Martin Club is anxious to book games with light first-class teams. Call Fairfax 3339 and ask for Bud.

The East Vandergrift Tigers would like to arrange games at home and abroad with light first-class teams. Write Bernard Kirk, Box 352, Vanderbilt, Pa.

department of the game as the final minutes ticked off, including the Scandanavian. The Orange, with a fine, accurate passing team, was handicapped by not having a single good shot to compete with the deadly accuracy of Hyatt, Reed, Wrobleski and Wunderlich.

Syracuse drew one jot of glory from the game. The captain, Eismann, was the leading scorer, sinking one foul to give him 15 points for the evening, one more than was scored by Hyatt.

Only one man was put out of the game via the four personal foul rule. Horowitz, the key man of the Syracuse defense, was escorted from the fray in the final five minutes. He needed the rest anyway. The lineup:

SOCCER NEWS by TOM BIRKS

ONLY one soccer game will be played in the district today out of 11 games carded over the weekend, all of the teams desiring to play tomorrow. The only session to entertain Pittsburghers will be dashed at Lawrence Park where the Pittsburgh Celtics hook up with the German Sport B Club in the District League.

Nothing of importance hinges on the outcome of the game which should find the Celtics on the long end of the score.

The members of the National Amateur Cup committee will be in town today for the third round draw. Armstrong Patterson of Detroit, first vice president of the national body, who is popular in Pittsburgh will be here, and will have along Tommy Smith of Detroit and our friend, Bill Angus of Cleveland, another national vice president.

SPORT COMMENT

they are not likely to figure very strongly in the balloting.

THE Cincinnati baseball club of the National League is feeding the Rhineland fans the usual winter bulletins that there is a prospect of one or two trades being pulled off before spring, but that even if these deals fail and no additional strength is added the Reds may be depended upon to make a much better showing than in 1927.

Red rooters are being informed that the club has made several attempts since the world series to swing trades for first-class players, and among other instances cited to put the Cincinnati club in a favorable light it is published that the Red management offered Pittsburgh its choice of First Baseman George Kelly or Wally Pipp and also Pitcher Carl Mays or some other hurler in exchange for Kiki Cuyler.

ACCORDING to President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates, Cincinnati offered only one player to the locals, that pastimer being Kelly, whom the local club did not want and promptly turned down. Shortly after leaving here for home in October, Manager Donie Bush went to Cincinnati at the invitation of the Red bosses for a conference on a trade for Cuyler. Bush had previously notified them that he wanted a second baseman and demanded Critz, and when the Cincinnati chiefs declined to trade Critz, withdrew Cuyler's name and tried to make a trade for Pete Donohue on a different basis. Cincinnati also refused to part with Donohue and the only player it offered to swap was Kelly, whereupon Bush called everything off.

Jack Hendricks.

ONCE upon a time somebody handed out an encouraging mouthful to the effect that "if you don't succeed at first, try, try again."

One baseball player who appears to have taken that advice to heart is Outfielder Frank (Lefty) O'Doul. An idea as to how strongly he has played the "try-try-again" stuff may be gleaned from the fact that he has been shipped back to the minors from the big leagues no fewer than four times, but is now coming back to the big show for his fifth trial.

O'Doul is on the roster of the Giants now, having been obtained from the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league, and he is said to be looking forward to the new season with just as much confidence as if he had never fallen down before.

Lefty O'Doul.

Repeated failures to make good in past opportunities in the fast set evidently have not had the slightest effect upon the morale of this oft-shifted player. He is said not to harbor the slightest doubt that he is coming to the majors this time to stay.

O'DOUL, who started out as a pitcher, broke into the majors first with the Yankees in 1918. The Yanks released him, then brought him back for a second trial. The Redsox were the next to give him a trial, but eventually sent him to the Pacific Coast League. The Chicago Nationals gave him his fourth chance in the big show in 1926, only to shunt him back to the coast again, and now he bobs up with the Giants for one more endeavor to make good.

Mr. Frisby explaining one of his bills to a constituent: "Never too busy to serve," says the ribbon on the Congressman's coat lapel.

By MR. FRISBY,
Congressman-at-Large.

WASHINGTON—With Congress again in session it is a pleasure to sharpen my pencil without fear or favor for the common good.

I have made considerable notes, and if I do say so myself, I was never in better voice. By merely clearing my throat, I attract the attention of my colleagues, which augurs well for the nation.

I have modestly prepared 432 resolutions, and 392 bills, including the famous Frisby Amendment to the Constitution abolishing alimony. My slogan is, "This Nation Can Not Survive Half Slave and Half Free."

My first act will be to introduce my resolution calling for a Turkey Shoot for the benefit of the Mississippi flood area. I am also organizing a mixed quartet among Congressmen to visit Armenia and the Grand Canyon as soon as Congress adjourns.

Let me take this opportunity to thank my constituents for the beautiful celluloid cuspidor which I found upon my desk today. It was a happy surprise and I shall try to be worthy of it.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "FLAIRS AND BEAUX"

To the modern girl
A new DRESS is very Interesting—so is a new MAN, and, it seems, they are Closely CONNECTED, for a
New dress often LEADS to
A new "flair," and all men
Hope to be "BEAUX" sometime.
To many a man, a woman's
CLOTHES are merely clothes,
That is, until he has to PAY for them. Then, of course,
He sees her DRESS through Different eyes. Some men
Are really INTERESTED in What a girl PUTS ON—
And they know HOW to Pay her a COMPLIMENT.
Some
Other men seem BLIND and
Never see why a girl
Makes herself ATTRACTIVE.
These are HOPELESS!
Of course, clever men don't Take EITHER women or Their dress SERIOUSLY, and
If asked what a
GIRL should wear to ATTRACT a man,
They would probably say—
VERY LITTLE!

THIS WAGGISH WORLD

by Roy K. Moulton

ARE YOU ENSLAVING YOUR WIFE?

THE question is whether your wife is a slave and you are a Simon Legree with a long blacksnake whip. If you are enslaving your wife in this day and age, you should go into a dime museum or join the freak department of a circus. People would pay a lot to see a superman.

HON. ELLEN WILKINSON, member of the English Parliament, says that women, the world over, are in a state of slavery and will be until they get their full rights. But even at that we have got to admit that Poor Old Papa hasn't got any fur coat or diamond ring. There are two sides to this question, like a washboard.

Since Hon. Wilkinson raised her voice in behalf of the poor enslaved women we have been watching some of them in our own block. The hardest piece of slavery we have seen any of them do is to put on a $2,000 fur coat and take a two-ounce dog out for a walk around the block. It must be the men in our block haven't started making slaves of ladies. The longer they put it off the happier they will be.

Slave Driver Husband comes from the trolley staggering under a dozen bundles and meets his wife in front of the door as she alights from her limousine or her taxicab.

"Oh, is that you, Massa Legree?"

"Yes, Sweetie, replies the hardened wretch. "Will ya hold a couple of the bundles while I find the doorkey?"

'Say, listen! What do you think I am? I am no delivery wagon and you may as well get that straight."

Thus the slavery of women goes on. Gosh! Ain't it awful?

LIVING as we do in an apartment house for many years, we have heard a good many arguments between these poor female slaves and their cruel masters. In all these years we do not remember the master having won a single bet.

It is perhaps true that many a mild soul has rebelled and has played with the idea of turning the tables and making a slave of his wife. They would like, once in their hollow and shallow lives, to crack the whip and see the party of the second part jump through. It is a grand idea to play with, so long as one doesn't play with it audibly.

When the average modern slave-wife steps forth from her home in the afternoon to attend her bridge or her matinee she will assay from five to fifty thousand dollars in apparel, jewels and manner. When the hated and cruel master starts for his office in the morning he represents at least $47 in clothing, a gold filled watch and a key ring. In his pockets there will be wealth—or as much as he has been able to borrow from his slave.

The slave has charge of the house-money, you know. And the house-money in most domiciles is all the money there is.

THE flinty-hearted and wicked brute who has enslaved his wife comes home on Saturday night—the big night—with the envelope which he tosses, with a sigh, to the cowering and shivering slave. She opens it quickly.

"You are fifty cents short this week, you brute," she breathes, chokingly and trembling with fear. "How often I got to tell you not to stop at that bicycle shop on the way home? You gotta stay off the stuff. None of it is any good. Anybody but a poor dunce like you would know it."

"Now listen," he replies in a terrible voice, and you can almost but not quite—see him reach for the rawhide whip. "Now listen, Madge ——"

"Not a word, you poor sap, on this. If you ever come home even ten cents short again I'll make you hard to catch. How am I going to make both ends meet and pay my maids and my chauffeur if you keep knocking down on me? One more offense and you go up the river for life, as far as I am concerned."

Yes, the slavery of modern women is something terrible and something drastic must be done about it at once.

Whatever is done will not be done by their husbands. They've had experience.

WHO FINANCED THE KILLING OF AMERICAN MARINES?

President Coolidge's Statements Are Enlightening

(Copyright, 1928, New York Evening Journal, Inc. Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

Colonel Gulick, commanding American marines in Nicaragua, told the Associated Press, after several marines had been killed and others wounded last week, that he was "convinced the re[illegible]utionists are being trained by nationals of some other country, and felt certain that the rebel chief is receiving money, supplies and ammunitions, as his men were uniformed in khaki."

OFFICERS SPEAK CAUTIOUSLY.

Officers of the United States Army and Navy talk carefully since General Mitchell's experience.

Colonel Gulick, presumably, did not say ALL he thought about the killing of his men "by nationals of some other country."

The American people want more definite information about that other country, and hope our Government will supply the information, and not content itself with muzzling Colonel Gulick.

The people want to know who "the nationals" were and from what "other country" Nicaragua's rebel chief "is" receiving supplies, money and ammunition.

WHO PAID FOR THE UNIFORMS?

Colonel Gulick feels certain that money, supplies and ammunition came from "some other country" because the rebel leader had his men "uniformed in khaki." Who PAID for the khaki uniforms, ammunition, money and supplies?

PROSPERITY IS PLEASANT, BUT—

One important news item is supplied by Mr. Henning, well informed Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who says United States international bankers will soon refund the foreign debt of Mexico.

In the process, of course, international banking would make large profits.

That would be gratifying, but what about the killing of American marines? That question interests Americans even more than the profits of international bankers.

Who paid for ammunition to facilitate killing American marines, employed by our Government to preserve order and protect treaty rights of the United States in connection with a Nicaraguan canal?

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE ACCUSED MEXICO.

Those questions, to which the people of the United States demand answers, appear to have been anticipated BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

On the 25th of April last, speaking at a United Press gathering, President Coolidge said:

> "Our relationship with Nicaragua I have set out in detail in a message to the Congress. The revolutionary forces appear to have received arms and ammunition from some sources in Mexico."

THE PRESIDENT ANSWERS.

Previously, on January 10, 1927, the President had said:

> "As a matter of fact, I have the most conclusive evidence that arms and munitions in large quantities have been on several occasions since August, 1926, shipped to the revolutionists in Nicaragua. Boats carrying these munitions have been fitted out in Mexican ports, and some of the munitions bear evidence of having belonged to the Mexican Government.
> "It also appeared that the ships were fitted out with the full knowledge of and, in some cases, with the encouragement of Mexican officials, and were in one instance at least commanded by a Mexican naval reserve officer."

CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE, BUT NOTHING DONE.

In those and other statements President Coolidge exposed the treacherous attitude of Mexico toward this country. But nothing was done about it.

Ships hostile to this country were "fitted out with the full knowledge and encouragement of Mexican officials," but the United States didn't do anything to discourage those Mexican officials. This country looked on, patient, supine, while Mexico proceeded with her plans to unite southern republics in hostility to the United States.

A CONFERENCE THAT FAILED.

To his statement that Nicaragua's "revolutionary forces appeared to have received arms and ammunition from some sources in Mexico," the President added, after the attempt of the United States to bring peace in Nicaragua failed:

> "The conference led to no result, since just at the time when it seemed as though some compromise agreement would be reached the representatives of Dr. Sacasa suddenly broke off negotiations.
> "According to our reports, the Sacasa delegates on this occasion stated freely that to accept any government other than one presided over by Dr. Sacasa himself would be A BREACH OF FAITH WITH THEIR MEXICAN ALLIES."

MORE IMPORTANT THAN PROFITS.

The new Ambassador to Mexico, Mr. Morrow, formerly a partner in J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., greatest of international banking firms, has made an "excellent impression" in Mexico, which is desirable and pleasing.

It is said that American investments in Mexican oil lands will not be confiscated. And American capitalists that had retired from enterprises in Mexico will now return to enrich Mexico with their investments and enterprise. That is MOST gratifying.

AGAIN THE QUESTION.

But the people of the United States will still ask:

WHO financed last week's killing of American marines? Who paid for ammunition sent to kill them?

Americans believe that President Coolidge gave the real answer last January, when he said he had "most conclusive evidence" that ships carrying murderous munitions to Nicaragua had "been fitted out in Mexican ports."

WHO KILLED OUR MEN?

United States citizens will not lose interest in the question, "Who killed our men, who supplied the money and ammunition?" merely because Mexico, in return for a refunding of her foreign debt and other considerations, promises to refrain from confiscation of American citizens' Mexican property.

The Government should protect the property rights of citizens, of course.

But, above all, IT SHOULD PROTECT THE LIVES OF ITS MEN.

The United States will not accept cancellation of confiscatory clauses in the Mexican Constitution in place of information as to the exact meaning of Colonel Gulick's accusation.

WHO WERE THE FOREIGN NATIONALS RESPONSIBLE FOR KILLING OUR MARINES IN NICARAGUA, SUPPLYING MUNITIONS, MONEY AND SUPPLIES FOR THAT PURPOSE? And will this country compromise murderous treachery for the sake of oil profits or banking profits?

Lame Duck Bill Back to House Republican Machine

The Senate has passed the resolution of Senator Norris proposing a constitutional amendment doing away with "lame ducks" and "lame duck" sessions of Congress.

Those are intolerable evils in a democracy. Look at the present practice:

We shall elect a new Congress in November, but it will not assemble to represent us until thirteen months later, namely in December, 1929.

But in the coming December the old rejected Congress will re-assemble and go right on legislating until it expires on March 4, 1928. It will contain scores of "lame ducks," Senators and Representatives just repudiated by their constituents.

It would be hard to devise a system better calculated to thwart the will of the people.

The Norris amendment provides for the new Congress to assemble on January 2 after election and for the new President to take office two weeks later.

Now for the fourth time the Norris resolution has passed the Senate—this time by a vote of 55 to 6.

Admittedly it would pass the House by as big a majority if it could come to vote. It has for three years been kept off the floor by the Republican machine in the House.

Is the Republican party going to carry into the 1928 campaign the grave responsibility of having four times blocked a vote on this constitutional reform, whose need is universally admitted?

"Old Trinity" Deserves Promotion to a Cathedral

The recent decision of Trinity Church officers and congregation to offer the edifice as a cathedral for the Pittsburgh diocese directly concerns only members of that congregation, particularly, and followers in the Episcopalian faith; but all are interested in the proposed change. It will be a matter of local pride to see "Old Trinity" raised from the status of a parish church to that of the seat of a bishopric.

The virtual unanimity with which the congregation ratified its officers' recommendation for the change indicates that it was not unmindful of the new dignity that would be acquired by the stately building set among the gravestones marking the resting places of some of Pittsburgh's pioneer residents.

Final decision rests with the Diocese of Pittsburgh, and the project is among those to be considered at a diocesan convention later this month. The situation as it now exists is basis for the belief that Trinity Church is to pass and Trinity Cathedral emerge. And that will be an honor the old church well deserves.

Light From an Englishman

Lord Rothermere has been over here looking around, and he warns England of America's great strength. It is beyond his imagination and is the most prodigious in the world's history.

It may be a good thing to have this fact noticed once in a while, not necessarily for warlike purposes. A strong nation can be a strong friend as well as a strong enemy.

The Intelligent-Minded

By DR. FRANK CRANE

SOME one said recently that the purpose of going to school or college was not to learn a lot of things, but merely to learn how to think.

The end of education is to train the mind. An educated man is better prepared than the ignorant to do anything, because he has a better foundation from which to start his practical knowledge.

But we should differentiate between having a good general education and knowing how to do a particular thing. A farmer can know more than a college president, a bootblack than a bishop, and a street sweeper than a judge—about some things.

A learned professor may have a wider range of knowledge and more education, but a specialist who spends all his life running a truck farm will know more about that kind of work than the don. A man may not have much schooling, but may have a good deal of shrewd common sense. In time past and in the Old World educated people considered themselves to be a clique especially set apart from common folks. They scorned practical information and looked down upon those who demonstrated their knowledge with their hands.

Often an educated man finds himself ill-fitted for the practical affairs of life when his formal training is done.

"At a small cost men are educated to make leather into shoes; but at a great cost what am I educated to make?" asked Carlyle. The world needs intelligent men and women more than educated persons. The two are not synonymous.

Often education is but the amassing of facts. Intelligence is a matter of wisdom and of attitudes.

An education is nothing but the tool for intelligence to work with.

The following tests to distinguish the intelligent-minded from the inferior-minded may be of help:

I. The inferior-minded demand cheap miracles and marvels. They do not see the eternal miracle of everyday life. Emerson said that fools admire the extraordinary, the wise man admires the ordinary.

II. The inferior-minded set great store on consistency and will sell honesty to obtain it. They cling to an original error, "proudly cling to their first fault, and wither in their pride."

III. The inferior-minded judge by the gilded husk or the outside appearance. The trappings, rich bindings and high prices outweigh what is the meat of the matter. They like lots of color in their clothes, noise in their music and action in the ir stories. The simple evades them.

IV. The inferior-minded judges an utterance by the author. If George Washington or Abraham Lincoln said it, it is all right. They don't think much of a truth if it comes from a bootblack.

To the intelligent-minded truth is truth, no matter what part of the woods it comes from.

The inferior-minded underrate their own opinions and overrate those of others.

Something to Think About

By BRUNO LESSING

Learning How to Think

HENRY FORD plans to establish a school in Massachusetts where boys will be taught "to do things with their hands, and how to think." If his plan works out successfully it will be the biggest thing he ever did in his life. Vastly more important than turning out a new, cheap automobile. In a few years all automobiles become junk. But the influence of a man who knows how to think may go on forever.

One cannot help wondering, however, what methods Mr. Ford will employ. And what "doing things with the hands" has to do with learning how to think. A man does not think with his hands.

Ars longa, vita brevis. Art is long, life is short'

So beautiful, so enjoyable, so wonderful is the intellectual life of the thinker that he regrets the time he must lose in sleeping and eating. Why lose more by carving wood or forging steel or making shoes?

The purpose of all schools and all systems of education throughout the centuries has been to teach the pupils how to think. In this they have disastrously failed. Even today, after all the hundreds of millions of dollars we have spent on school houses and teachers, not one person in a thousand knows how to think. As a matter of fact, very few know how to speak English correctly, and that is a much simpler matter than learning how to think.

With Mr. Ford's immense wealth, it would be possible for him to make a unique experiment in this field. He could undertake to find out WHETHER PEOPLE CAN BE TAUGHT TO THINK AT ALL.

Some philosophers claim that you can merely cram the mind with facts but cannot train it to think for itself. They maintain that the thinking mind is born and cannot be made. Maybe they're right; maybe they're wrong. But it would be an interesting experiment.

Of one thing you may be sure: you may cut and polish a coblestone for two thousand years yet it will never shine like a diamond.

New York Day by Day
by
O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—With Fifth Avenue's Millionaire Row almost completely wiped out by a new de luxe apartment house area for the lesser slobs, and the lower section of the avenue given over to trade, Park avenue has permanently established itself as the bon ton boulevard.

Aside from millionaires and multi-millionaires, there are 4,000 families on Park avenue whose average annual income is $75,000. This section spends more than $5,000,000 a year for theater tickets. Its florist bill exceeds $2,000,000. That last item made me pout all day.

Park avenue, peculiarly enough, spreads its luxury northward to an abrupt ending in a poverty-stricken Ghetto. The street now boasts of three famous restaurants in Sherry's, Pierre's and the Marguery. A few sedate signless drug stores comprise the bulk of concession to trade.

Society editors refer to it as The Gold Coast, after the Chicago aristocratic district of another day. It has an austere manner, and the apartment house owners make a thorough investigation of the past history of prospective tenants.

Many who have made fortunes in shady fashion and seek the shelter of Park avenue merely for the toney address have been turned away. Although, of course, as in all hoity-toity neighborhoods a few ladies with purple pasts crash the barriers.

But Park avenue must pay a high tax for its swank. Innumerable tradesmen in the rarified purlieus make no secret their prices are tilted to people there. So much so hundreds of Park avenuers send out their servants for cash and carry buying.

Madison avenue's most aristocratic strip is encompassed in the old Murray Hill section—a residential area of sedate homes boasting such families as the Morgans and the Bakers. Murray Hill has persistently fought encroachment of trade that has gobbled up other sections of that avenue.

One of New York's best known head waiters entrusted $11,000 to one of his favorite guests for investment. And that was the last he saw of the f. g. or his $11,000. That's the way it is the world over, loan a friend and love flies out the window.

Libby's, the largest Jewish hotel in the world on Delancey street, is offering from 9 p. m. to 3 a. m. cabaret entertainment to patrons of its Turkish baths. Ninety-eight per cent of the patrons I have seen in Turkish baths would not know a cabaret entertainment from a—well, you know how cock-eyed people are?

There used to be a Turkish bath in Cincinnati that was the Saturday night rendezvous for lushers. And there one of the best of the old yarns had its origin. A befuddled gentleman fell asleep in the baking room and his roystering friends coated his face and chest with tar and a sprinkling of feathers. After a time he awakened, dripping with perspiration, glanced at himself in a mirror and cried: "In hell—and a bird!"

Most Turkish bath rubbers are fat despite constant sweating. Some become so obese they have to give up their trade. They can't bend over.

Noted in a theater program: "Please do not send mash notes back stage. Every member of the company is married." What difference does that make in New York?

The first successful night club in New York was The Little Club, opened, I believe, by Justine Johnson. It survives and is the only club remaining among those of that day that retains its original name. A Broadway prognosticator predicts in another year all night clubs will be above Fifty-ninth street, which is not so highly important even if true.

Tales That Are Told

Recognized!

AN OLD farmer who had never listened to a wireless set was persuaded to don the headphones.

"You don't know what you're missing, uncle," said his nephew. "It's a wonderful invention. Got the earpieces right? Well then, I'll just switch on the—"

Suddenly there was a splitting, cracking streak of lurid lightning, followed by a peal of loud thunder. The old farmer sprang up out of his chair and fell over on the floor. He came to half an hour later.

"Good heavens!" were his first words. "Maggie—and she's been dead 30 years!"

No Nature Fake

MCTAVISH went into the Glasgow antique dealer's shop to buy a pair of antlers that had taken his fancy.

After a certain amount of haggling the dealer in antiques reduced the price from five guineas to two. But even then McTavish was not satisfied.

"Hech, mon," he complained, "are they no awfu' dear?"

"Of course they're aff a deer," roared the man behind the counter. "Did ye think they cam' frae a rabbit?"—London Answers.
